New Witch Broth
Wales Will Remember
The Tetraplane Mystery
The Deaf Man Shouted
—By Arthur Brisbane—

WITCH LADIES put many queer things in the cauldron for their terrible broth.

"Eyes of newt, and toe of frog,
"Wool of bat, and tongue of dog."

Also, you remember the baby's finger, fillet of a fenny snake, adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting.

All that is nothing to the "Stop Roosevelt" broth now being concocted in Chicago. Every baleful ingredient is mixed in that strange soup.

If the New York governor escapes the dish prepared by the "Stop Roosevelt" crowd, he will prove himself an able politician.

Which of the following happenings would be called "news?"

In New York a lawyer, 65 years old, jumped to death.

In Chile Socialistic and Communistic experimenters inaugurate a curfew that stops everything at 10 p. m. Theaters close at 8:30.

A new comet has been found near the South Pole, of 10th magnitude, visible to the naked eye. If it wishes to keep out of the depression, it should STAY near the South Pole.

Von Papen, Germany's new chancellor, proposes, privately, a military alliance between France and Germany.

Some Americans, veterans and others, will exclaim: "What do you know about that?"

We do not know anything, except that it is not improbable.

The Prince of Wales was 38 years old yesterday and looks back over a busy year. In it he took up fast motor boating, book collecting, motor cycle driving.

Two of his barns in Canada were burned, he was ill several days, got a new dog to replace the old one, played Santa Claus with white whiskers on Christmas, set the fashion for spotted ties and turned-down soft collars, even with a "morning coat" and stovepipe hat.

He met Amelia Earhart, discussed flying with her, installed a radio in his airplane, attended the Doumer funeral.

These things he will forget. But never will he forget that in his 38th year he made a hole in one.

What is a "terraplane?" It is a mysterious word that certain energetic makers of automobiles and Arthur Kudner, who looks after their publicity, have been muttering and whispering mysteriously for some time.

News from Detroit, whither Mr. Kudner has just flown in his two-engine Sikorsky, reports that the mysterious "terraplane" has to do with the launching of a new automobile.

Newspaper publishers will greet the information pleasantly since it means important advertising.

It takes courage to start anything new just now, more particularly a new automobile. But there is always room at the top, and opportunity, for there is no crowd there to impede your movements.

Last night in Dublin's Phoenix Park, well known as the scene of a great political tragedy, a scene very different was arranged. Two hundred and fifty thousand men, in military formation, sang before a high altar, in the presence of Cardinal Lauri, Papal legate who presided at the great outdoor demonstration. A special choir of men led the singing of the great army of 250,000. Microphones and amplifiers added to the volume of sound.

Once, goes the story, it was suggested that all the earth's inhabitants unite in a great shout at the same moment, that men of the moon, if any, might hear it. When the moment came, all but one man kept perfectly silent, waiting to hear the great noise. The one man that shouted was stone deaf.

We who worry about small things ought to remember our blessings, including the usual quietness of the world's big oceans. Mexicans are reminded of it by an earthquake 400 miles out in the Pacific west of Cuyutlan. The floor of the ocean, rising, sent a great tidal wave inland, killing 34 in Cuyutlan, carrying many out to sea. We should be grateful that oceans and lakes behave so well, making tidal waves so rare.

The slightest check in the earth's turning on its axis would send waves a mile high all over the earth, sweeping away everything that men have done. That would cause a real depression.

Mussolini does what he undertakes. He knew that millions in gold lay at the bottom of the sea in the British steamer Egypt, and sent divers to get the gold, at a depth hitherto accounted hopeless.

Two good ships with 15 able seamen were lost, but such things do not stop Mussolini, and yesterday the first million dollars' worth of gold bars came up from the Egypt's hold.

Parker Strokes Crimson Eight to Victory; Freshmen Lose First Race of the Day

Regatta Course, New London, June 24 (AP)—Stroked by 'Gus' Parker, leather-muscled young dynamo, a surprisingly powerful Harvard junior varsity, swept over the wind-swept waters of the Thomas today to conquer a highly-favored Yale eight, stone for the earlier defeat of the Crimson freshmen, and scramble the dope completely for the four-mile varsity climax of the old regatta this evening.

So strong was the wind and so rough the water that the course for the afternoon preliminaries had to be shifted from upstream to down the river, the distance shortened to one and a half miles and the start of the program delayed almost two hours.

YALE FRESHMEN WIN

While far fewer than the usual throngs of regatta day shivered in a biting wind that swept down from

Buckley's Stolen Car Is Recovered

New York, June 24 (INS)—Mrs. Elizabeth Buckley, wife of the manager of Jack Sharkey, new heavyweight champion, today recovered her stolen automobile. Police held four Negroes they found riding in the car in Brooklyn.

Two revolvers were found in the automobile. Records indicated the quartet was sought in Mount Vernon, N. Y., on holdup charges.

EX-MAYOR'S BOYS IN PIKE COLLISION

DEXTER NICHOLS Former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols' two sons, Dexter and Clark, were badly injured in an automobile collision on the turnpike in Danvers today, in which a woman, 77, is dying. Seven others, including the boys' grandfather and an infant, were injured. The boys are shown here with their sister, Marjorie, who was not a member of the party.

Aged Woman Dying, Another Has a Fractured Skull in Collision at Danvers

Ex-Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols' two sons, Clark, 15, and Dexter, 13, were painfully injured today with eight other persons in a head-on collision between their father's car and another automobile on the Newburyport Turnpike in Danvers.

Also injured were the boys' grandfather, Fred M. Williams, who lives with the former mayor; his brother, Stephen H. Williams of Seaverns ave., Jamaica Plain, and the chauffeur, Robert C. Burke of 120 Dorchester ave., South oBston.

A 77-year-old woman riding in the other car is dying at Hunt Memorial Hospital, Danvers, where all the injured were taken. She is Mrs. Lucy S. Myers, Gerrish rd., Salisbury.

A baby eight months old in this machine was hurled from the rear to the front seat and bruised. Both cars overturned.

BOTH BOYS CUT

Ex-Mayor Nichols, who was not in the party in his car, went to the hospital in Danvers and took his boys to their home, 796 Center st., Jamaica Plain.

Both boys were badly bruised and cut. Dexter was X-rayed for possible broken bones, and his brother had four stitches taken in his left hand, which was badly cut.

The boys were en route to Portland, Me., and the other car, which was driven by Julian F. Oliver, of Gerrish rd., Salisbury, was en route toward Boston.

Police said that those in the Nichols party claimed Oliver cut out of line, but he denied it.

Oliver escaped injury. The injured baby is his nephew, John Nelson Oliver, whose mother, Mrs. Gertrude M. Oliver, was only stirred up.

WOMAN'S SKULL FRACTURED

The others in this machine, in addition to Mrs. Myers and the baby, requiring hospital treatment, were Mrs. Nettie Rice, 75, of Clarks rd., Amesbury, and Miss Miriam Harold, 15 Brewster ave., Yonkers, N. Y. Miss Harold's skull was fractured.

Three stitches were taken in a scalp laceration suffered by S. H. Williams, whose brother was less seriously bruised and cut.

The crash occurred near New Moon Inn, between Center and Newbury sts., Danvers. Many other cars stopped and police were soon time disentangling the traffic jam. State police and Danvers authorities are investigating.

'Czar' for Boxing Is Demand

Title "Scandal" Still Stirs Nation; Officials Ignore Clamor

New York, June 24—Although the integrity of their officials has been publicly impugned in the storm of protest still raging over the decision that made Jack Sharkey heavyweight champion last Tuesday night the New York State Athletic Commission is sitting tight and complacently ignoring the general demand for an investigation of the processes whereby Max Schmeling was deprived of the title.

A regular commission meeting is scheduled for this afternoon at the State building, but nothing except routine business is contemplated. Joe Jacobs, who yelled "robbery" over a nation-wide radio hookup Tuesday night and followed with a strong indictment of the officials, has not been summoned, nor have the referee and two judges been asked to appear.

The attitude of the commission is that nothing will be done unless somebody files formal charges.

COMPLAINTS POUR IN

Meanwhile, the flood of telegrams, cables and letters protesting against the decision continues as a backwash of sentiment "from all over the world—sentiment aroused by the radio report which had Schmeling winning all the way and Sharkey getting the decision.

Garden officials were bombarded with complaints and it was said that many outraged boxing fans had paid their compliments

SMITH TAKES COMMAND IN CAMPAIGN

McAdoo Joins 1928 Nominee in a Roundup of the Anti-Roosevelt Forces

Today's pre-convention developments among Democrats assembling in Chicago were:

1—John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall, and John H. McCooey, Brooklyn leader, were said to hold the key to the presidential nomination and to be opposed to both Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith.

2—Bitter attack by Smith spokesman, Mayor Hague of Jersey City, on Roosevelt is interpreted by some leaders as an offer by Smith to quit the race if Roosevelt would do likewise.

3—Drive of Roosevelt men to abrogate two-thirds rule brings loud protests from Sen. Glass and other Southern leaders and threat of a third party from Governor Murray of Oklahoma.

4—Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland will arrive today. It was regarded as significant that his name led those in the list that the Hague-Smith statement put forward as men who would meet the present situation better than Roosevelt.

5—Threat of a third party, made up of the youth of America, was voiced before the resolutions committee by President Hutchins of Chicago University, pleading for clean-cut planks on prohibition, economic problems and other big issues of the campaign.

6—Governor Kly, in his speech offering Alfred E. Smith for the presidential nomination, will make a plea for the right of a Roman Catholic to seek any office in the United States.

Pictures and Other Details on Pages 2, 3, 4, 6, 7

Chicago, June 24—Alfred E. Smith donned the epaulets as leader of the opposition to Franklin D. Roosevelt today and began a move to unite supporters of other candidates to block the nomination of the New York Governor.

As Roosevelt supporters confidently completed plans to toss out the two-thirds rule and to have Sen. Walsh of Montana in as permanent chairman, Smith conferred with leaders of opposition

LATE NEWS FLASHES

POSTAL INSURANCE RATES INCREASED

Washington, June 24 (AP)—The Senate today passed and sent to the White House a bill increasing postal insurance and collect-on-delivery rates, which the Postoffice Department estimated would yield $2,500,000 annual revenue. The measure provides for graduated increases in all but the minimum rates now charged, and adds a 30-cent rate for insurance up to $150 value and 35 cents up to $200.

Washington, June 24 (AP)—A favorable report on the nomination of Gardner Cowles, Sr., Des Moines publisher, for a director of the Reconstruction Corp. was voted today by the Senate banking committee.

MINISTER, 82, LOST IN WOODS

Chesham, N. H., June 24 (AP)—Rev. E. W. Whitney, 82, a retired Unitarian minister of Allston, was the object of a search today in the woods and Silver Lake here. He has been missing from a summer camp since yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Whitney came here with his son, Rev. Arthur B. Whitney of Quincy, and his grandson, Rev. H. Blair Whitney of Medfield. The latter two went to Keene yesterday afternoon and failed to find the aged man upon their return. They searched for him last night, and a posse of 50 men was gathered today to aid.

Mr. Whitney had been in feeble health for some time.

JAIL DAD OF 7 IN DOLE FRAUD

Ubald J. Gagnon, father of seven children, of Essex st., Lynn, pleaded guilty today to receiving a total of $70 in city aid, when he had a job of $30 a week.

He was sent to Salem jail for two months.

But that doesn't save the city any money.

While he's in jail, the city will have to look after his family, explained Joseph Cole, head of the welfare department.

And if Gagnon loses his job, the city will probably have to take care of him, too, after he is released.

Malden Avoids Check Tax

Malden city employes were paid off in cash yesterday for the first time in more than five years because it was believed payroll checks would require a two-cent tax.

FIVE SAVED ON BOAT IN GALE

Tiverton, R. I., June 24 (AP)—Five Greater Boston men were rescued from possible drowning during a heavy squall which swept Narragansett Bay last night and beached their auxiliary yacht on the shores of the estate of William Durfee, Jr.

They were Norbert, 35, and Richard McAnarney, 27, sons of City Solicitor J. J. McAnarney of Quincy, Mass.; J. F. Bradley, 31, Quincy; Robert Damriel, 25, Medford, and William Carey, 17, Quincy.

Bound from Boston for the Harvard-Yale boat races at New London, the men in their yacht, which was owned by the elder McAnarney, put in here for the night. The heavy squall caught them in a precarious condition and despite three anchors the craft dragged toward shore against rocks near a wharf which projects from the Durfee place.

John Flynn, caretaker of the estate, saw their plight and put out to the assistance of the five.

Mercury Sags to Lowest June Mark

Contrary to popular belief, the geese weren't flying south this morning, although the mercury in Lexington dropped to 37, the lowest June mark in many years. Only the wind prevented a frost which would have damaged gardens.

The forecast is for continued fair skies tonight and tomorrow with a rising temperature.

The official minimum in Boston was 46, recorded at 2 o'clock this morning. It was by three degrees the lowest temperature for the date in the history of the weather bureau.

ELY FIGHTS BIGOTRY IN MOVE TO NAME SMITH

HE WILL PLEAD FOR TOLERANCE AT CHICAGO

Coakley Leading in Race for National Committeeman; Walsh Rules Delegation

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

A striking defence of the right of every Roman Catholic American to hold any office within the gift of his fellow citizens will be made by Gov. Joseph B. Ely in his speech nominating Alfred E. Smith for President at Chicago next week.

Ely is on his way West today, the first draft of his nominating speech tucked carefully away with other private papers.

Mrs. Ely is with him. Their immediate destination is East Brady, Pa., where tomorrow their only son will be married.

They will arrive at the scene of the convention on Sunday or Monday and will join the Massachusetts delegation, which will already be quartered at the Stevens Hotel.

The Ely speech in nomination of Smith is expected to be delivered to the convention in the Chicago Stadium on Wednesday or Thursday.

Meanwhile, Ely will confer with Smith and his campaign managers, including Judge Proskauer of New York and Frank Hague of Jersey City. It is in these conferences that the final draft of the speech will be agreed upon.

RELIGIOUS ISSUE

Ely was chosen for this role because of his Eastern residence and because of his governorship of the State which went for Smith conspicuously in the last Presidential campaign and in the recent Presidential primaries. He occupies the role which, for the same reasons, was occupied by Governor Roosevelt four years ago.

Like Roosevelt, he is a Protestant and the politicians assume he could speak out his mind on the religious angle without incurring the disfavor of the convention.

In any event, this subject, which most leaders shun with fear and trepidation, will be fully discussed in the early and private conferences which will precede the presentation of Smith's name to the convention.

Senator Walsh will serve as the Bay State member of the resolutions committee, which will be marked by the usual, long-drawn-out squabble over prohibition. He has been authorized to get into these parleys pronto without awaiting his formal election by the Bay State delegation.

COAKLEY IN LEAD

Ely, who will serve as chairman of the Bay State unit, will call the folks into session Monday morning at Chicago and the plan is to settle then only the routine and minor matters. They hesitate to precipitate so early in the game the fight that is to be waged over the election of the Democratic national committeeman to succeed Judge Frank J. Donahue.

Daniel H. Coakley, it seems, has the majority of the votes on this day and date. At least, he has the pledges, if political pledges mean anything in these days of duck and double-duck.

Coakley is not wanted by all the folks in the Bay State Democracy, and he seems to know it. He says if he gets down it will be only after a fight. And none of the strong men, from Walsh to Ely to the humblest private, seems to want to take Coakley on at catch-weights or any weight whatever.

John F. Fitzgerald is said not to have been able to drum up a corporal's guard against him. Nor does he show any overwhelming disposition to put his own name into the fracas.

RITCHIE SECOND CHOICE

This much can be written down in certain terms: There will be no headlong break from Massachusetts to Roosevelt, if there is any concerted break at all it may be Ritchie of Maryland.

Walsh likes Ritchie personally, and might be able to swallow if not digest Ritchie's recent defense of the power trust. And Walsh is the real power in the Bay State Democracy. He is not keen for Baker. Their disagreement is on Baker's belief that America can be built up by building up the rest of the world and Walsh's belief that America should be built up first and for itself, first, last and most of the time.

If Walsh decided to break to Roosevelt, which is the remotest of possibilities, he would be the general of an army of one general and no privates. The recent fight between Smith and Roosevelt in this State settled that. Moreover, Ely is understood to have sent word to Roosevelt that he would never support him if Roosevelt put a ticket into the field here against Smith.

So, it may be seen that the Democrats, 120 of them, who leave for Chicago on Saturday, will take along a peck of their own troubles as well as running into another peck of troubles out there. The best bet is that the delegation will still be voting for Smith, when, if and even if he takes himself out of the race.

But they can be assured of a few agreeable moments. Madame Rose Zulalian of Boston is to open the convention by singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

SENATE ROW ON ECONOMY BILL

Washington, June 24—The House-Senate conference on the $150,000,000 economy bill met stubborn resistance as the Senate took up consideration of House changes.

The opposition developed in consideration of routine conference agreements, with prospects that the furlough plan, the exemption of which was reduced from $1200 to $1000 by the House, would provoke even more dissension.

As Sen. La Follette (R) of Wisconsin led the attack, Sen. Bratton (D) of New Mexico, one of the conferees, snapped:

"The senator from Wisconsin is more responsible than any other senator for the confusion in this bill by his advocacy of the furlough plan."

Sen. Reed (R) of Pennsylvania objected strenuously to a House amendment, approved by the conferees, which provided that married women in the government service living with their husbands should be the first to be discharged in the event of a shortage of funds.

Los Angeles, June 24 (AP)—Bebe Daniels and her husband, Ben Lyon, film stars, today obtained passports and said they would leave within a few days for Europe by way of New York. They said their trip will last three months.

Pair Have Man's Bridgework Pulled to Satisfy Debt

New York, June 24 (AP)—Joe Bernstein has a bona to pick but is shy teeth with which to pick it.

Mr. Bernstein, when times are good, chauffs for a living. Of late chauffing has been a drug on the market on account of so many people who formerly hired chauffeurs going to work on street cars and roller skates.

So, a few weeks ago, Bernstein borrowed $50 from the brothers Baratz—Daniel and William—for whom he formerly worked.

As the amazing story was told to police today by Bernstein, the Baratz boys importuned him to repay the loan. This, with things the way they are, was out of the question.

Came night, and (this is Bernstein's story) the Baratz boys and another fellow called at his home and made him accompany them to a dentist's office. Bernstein thought they had a job for him, and he was elated no end.

At the office the dentist inquired:

"Which of you gentlemen wants his teeth removed?"

"Right here," someone said, shoving Bernstein into the chair.

"Ah-wa, ah-wa," said Bernstein, but the dentist only smiled.

"I know just how you feel, my friend," he said, rattling his tools and yanking open Bernstein's mouth. "Just a minute and all will be well—I hope."

A man in a dentist's chair with his mouth held open is in no position to carry on an intelligent conversation or, for that matter, any conversation. Mr. Bernstein confined himself to facial contortions intended to imply great resentment, dismay and horror. Occasionally he said "Ah-wa."

The dentist removed all the bridgework he could find in the Bernstein mouth, which, Bernstein told police, was plenty. One of the Baratz boys paid the dentist and the party left, with Bernstein still in tow.

"They got me in their car," he said, "and took all my clothes except my trousers. I regard the entire procedure as entirely uncalled for."

The Baratz brothers were arrested.

DOG TAKES NAP IN STREET

A St. Bernard dog, snoring lustily, was found sound asleep at Parmenter and Diana rds. in Newton. He is now being kept at the Animal Rescue League.

The big fellow started to eat the humane society out of house and home and officials wouldn't be displeased if his owner claimed him.

When the agents answered a telephone call and brought the animal in the Carver st. headquarters, it was expected the owner would soon appear. However, no master has called for "Carmera," as the league workers have named him.

HERRIOT GIVEN GERMAN PLAN FOR ALLIANCE

Von Papen Sounds Out France on Proposal for Military and Economic Union

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service Staff Correspondent.
Copyright, 1932, by International News Service.

Lausanne, June 24 (INS)—The first definite step toward a Franco-German "understanding"—with a political and military alliance the ultimate aim—was taken by Chancellor Franz von Papen of the Reich today during a private meeting with Premier Herriot of France.

It provided Von Papen with his first real opportunity to develop with the French premier his idea of an all-inclusive Franco-German union. First disclosed by International News Service Wednesday, the projected alliance has since become the principal point of discussion at the reparations conference.

PLAN CONFIRMED

Chancellor Von Papen today furnished final and authentic confirmation of his unprecedented plan. He made it clear that he firmly intends to develop his idea, but he has too delicate a diplomatic hand to force the issue in any way and thus incur the risk of "bruising France's war memories."

It may now be stated with absolute authority that the basis of the new German chancellor's foreign policy is a political and military alliance with France.

WILL WORK SLOWLY

But knowing the susceptibilities of the French, whose war memories are longer and more bitter than those of Germany, he intends to progress by easy stages, approaching the topic by delicate routes to see how the idea "takes."

While his talk with the premier ostensibly concerned economic cooperation between the traditional enemies of Continental Europe, International News Service learned that before the conference ended Von Papen entered on what might be termed "delicate ground."

PRINCE HONORS SICK CHILD

London, June 24—Five-year-old Peter Garvie is one of the proudest lads in the world. He was made the recipient of a small guard's uniform by the Prince of Wales as a reward for stoic bravery while having stitches removed in a London hospital by her children.

"Lifeguards don't cry," the nurse told Peter, and he gritted his teeth for the operation, and stemmed his tears.

When the Prince went through the hospital on a visit, Peter told him determinedly that he wanted to be a lifeguard.

"You shall be when you grow up," the Prince promised him, and subsequently had a miniature uniform sent him.

Although Peter was confined to his bed a while, he wore his red coat and silver helmet.

NEW FIRE PROBE AT SQUANTUM

After state and Quincy fire officials determined that the million-and-a-quarter dollar fire at the Victory plant, Squantum, had probably been caused by an carelessly thrown cigarette, Quincy police began investigating an incendiary blaze among 40 yachts in the dry slip which was not touched by the main fire.

The blaze was discovered in a 40-foot cabin cruiser several hours after the fire in the wet slip section had started. After a stubborn fight, the fire was extinguished.

Yesterday afternoon, Quincy Fire Chief William J. Sands said the blaze in the boat had been deliberately set and asked Quincy police to investigate.

Man Out of Work, Starving, Collapses

White Plains, N. Y., June 24 (AP)—Out of work and without food four days, Harold B. Frazier, 52, of 157 Cedar st., Manchester, N. H., collapsed of starvation in Main st. here today.

He was taken to the county hospital. His condition is serious. He had started for home from New York, still looking for work, when he fainted.

BONUS ARMY DEFIES POLICE

By FRASER EDWARDS

Washington, Jun 24—A harsh "go-home-or-go-hungry" ultimatum has been served on the bonus expeditionary forces by Chief Pelham D. Glassford, in starting a determined drive to speedily evacuate the 20,000 veterans occupying the nation's capital.

In a grim "no surrender" statement, Commander-in-Chief Walter W. Waters replied that the vast majority of his ragged "army" had "dug in" to stay until the bonus is paid, regardless of privations, and added:

"We'd just as soon starve here as starve at home."

This resolute attitude of the leaders of the opposing forces clearly indicated that the situation is rapidly nearing a show-down between the police and the veterans, whose vanguard marched into Washington nearly four weeks ago.

Glassford issued a lengthy statement outlining the reasons which he said make hunger and privation inevitable if the veterans insist upon remaining here, and "as a friend" advised them to go home. It was a continuation of Glassford's "iron fist in a velvet glove" policy, but he promised "sterner measures" to carry his point.

Waters replied in kind, he expressed appreciation for the kindness of Glassford and Washington citizens to the veterans, but firmly refused to budge. He announced a move to force an extra session of Congress and declared the federal government must feed the men if voluntary contributions fail.

SENORA CALLES TO RECOVER

The complete recovery of Senora Leonor Calles, young wife of the former President of Mexico, was predicted by Dr. Manuel Puig Casaurance in a statement issued at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

Senora Calles, from whose brain Dr. Harvey Cushing yesterday removed a tumor, is resting comfortably at Peter Bent Brigham hospital and the operation is as good as could be expected, said the Mexican ambassador, who is a member of former President Calles' party.

An Associated Press dispatch from Mexico City said friends of Calles there believe he will submit to medical attention here when his wife is out of danger, but Dr. Joseph J. Eller, son-in-law of the former president who is with him in Boston, declared there is no basis for such a rumor.

Tipsy Driver Fined $75

Matthias Doucette, of Adams street, was fined $75 in Waltham district court for driving while under the influence of liquor. A charge of drunkenness was placed on file.

The Problem

THE need of the hour is the exertion of the will to act—the initiation of some impulse to renew consuming purchasing power throughout the country.

The Remedy

A $5,000,000,000 bond issue by the United States to build great public works, employ several million men and start the nation back to prosperity.

SON DEFENDS MOTHER HELD AS SLAYER

Back Bay Attorney on Way to Aid the Woman Accused of Poisoning N. H. Farmer

Nearly a score of years ago Lyman Reynolds "hung his shingle" in the placid Maine village of Sebec and dreamed his dream of the "one big case" that would, some day, establish his fame in the profession of the law.

(All young lawyers share such dreams—of Edward Burke and Webster, and Rufus Choate.)

But nothing ever happened in sleepy Sebec, except farmers quarrelling over land claims and spavined horses—or fishermen being arrested for having short trout.

So Reynolds came to Boston, and hung his shingle, and for years and years it seemed that nothing much ever happened here, either, an dthat, so far as one big case was concerned for him, destiny had passed him by.

GETS HIS BIG CASE

Yet the destiny that had led Reynolds into the profession of law is that same destiny which shapes men's ends and today he was called on the "big case" of his career.

Today he was called to defend his aged mother against a charge of murder.

At his home, 327 Huntington ave., early this morning, the telephone rang and an official of Merrimack County, New Hampshire, notified him that Mrs. Cora Reynolds, 72, was being charged with the murder of Alexander Stewart, 70, a Wilmot, N. H., farmer by whom she was employed as housekeeper.

TO REPAY SACRIFICES

His white-haired client is the woman who bore him nearly half a centur ygo; the mother who sacrificed many things in order that two sons and a daughter daughter might have every advantage—in order that on each might realize his ambition to be a great attorney.

Today, pleading her innocence, she stands accused of the most terrible of crimes and her son has assumed the direction of her defense.

Reynolds left at once for Concord, N. H., center of the investigation into the three weeks' old mystery of the death of Stewart, found dead in his home, a victim of poison.

"I am proceeding to Concord immediately to act as my mother's counsel," Reynolds told the Boston Evening American.

"I have just been notified that she is to be charged with the murder. I know few of the details of the case and prefer to make no statement until I do."

ANOTHER SON TO AID.

Mrs. Reynolds has another son, Louis C. Reynolds of st. Cambridge, and a married daughter, living in Boston. They also will go to the defense of the aged woman, as well, it is expected, a host of friends in Cambridge, where she at ons time lived.

Mrs. Reynolds, who was Stewart's housekeeper for 10 years, came to Boston June 8, the day the farmer was found dead. She was taken ill at the North Station, sent to Haymarket relief station and later transferred to the City Hospital, where her two sons and daughter were summoned.

She returned voluntarily to Concord for questioning after it had been determined that Stewart died of a poison, traces of which were found in his stomach, in a coffee cup and in coffee grounds.

SECULAND SANE

She was placed in the State Hospital at Concord and was declared sane. Last night Atty.-Gen. Francis Johnston City Solicitor Willoughby Colby and other officials conferred and planned a campaign her on a charge of murder tomorrow.

It is understood the defense will claim that Stewart committed suicide. Mrs. Reynolds claims to have left the farm about two hours before the farmer took poison. Her decision to leave him may have been the motive for the farmer's self-destruction, Mrs. Reynolds' Cambridge friends say.

BANDITS ROB STORE MANAGER

Two holdup men were waiting for Patrick A. Murphy, manager of a chain store at 955 Winthrop ave., in the Beachmont section of Revere, when he went to open the store today.

"Hey, got any cigarettes in there?" they asked him as he unlocked the door.

"Sure," he said.

They followed him in. He went behind the counter and when he turned around he found himself looking into the muzzle of a revolver.

"Shell out!" they told him.

Murphy handed them $5 that was in the cash register, but said nothing about other money hidden among the groceries.

The gunmen ordered him into a back room, but when he heard the pair leaving, he came out and watched them hurry away.

Station Dropping Approved

The Public Utilities Commission today approved the petition of the Boston & Maine Railroad to abandon passenger stations at East Everett, South Lowell, Pepperell and East Watertown.

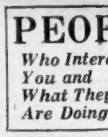
Vanderbilt Widow Off for Tour of France

New York, June 24—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, society leader of New York and Newport, is on the high seas today, bound for Europe.



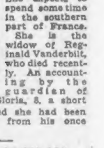
Mrs. Vanderbilt

Mrs. Vanderbilt left yesterday for a six-week visit to Paris and other French cities. She expects to spend some time in the southern part of France.

She is the widow of Reginald Vanderbilt, who died recently. An accounting by the guardian of their daughter, Gloria, 8, a short time ago, revealed she had been left but $100,000 from his once large estate.

Chicago Pays $4,500,000 in Overdue Salaries

Chicago, June 24—Payment of $4,500,000 in back salaries to policemen, firemen, teachers and other civic employes was ordered here today by Mayor Anton Cermak following a conference yesterday with loop bankers over the city's financial situation.



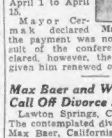
Mayor Cermak

The payments cover the checks covered in the order will be for the period from April 1 to April 15.

Mayor Cermak declared the payment was not a direct result of the conference. He declared, however, the meeting had given him renewed optimism.

Max Baer and Wife Call Off Divorce Plans

Lawton Springs, Cal., June 24—The contemplated divorce action of Max Baer, California heavyweight boxer, and his wife has been abandoned, it was revealed here today.



Mrs. Max Baer

Mrs. Baer is the former Dorothy Dunbar Wells, one time stage and screen actress.

The couple have kissed and made up and there is no further cloud in their marital happiness. Baer is in training here for a July 4 bout with King Levinsky.

WOMEN UNITE IN HUGE CEREMONY IN DUBLIN

Wooer and Suer

The characters in this "movie strip" are "Struttin'" Dave Hutton, corpulant spouse of the Rev. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, of Angeles Temple fame, and pretty Myrtle Hazel Joan St. Pierre, comely Pasadena nurse. In testimony "Dave" is set up as a typical divan wooer—a promiser of marriage—who failed. Hazel, as her friends call her, wants heart balm—$200,000. The battle wages in a Los Angeles court. Aimee stands by her hubby, although she is forced to remain in her sick bed. News from co-st is that the divan story caused "Dave" to squirm and fidget. (International News Photos.)

CASH NOT SOLE OBJECT, GIRL DECLARES

More of the Baritone's Alleged Love-Making on Divan Is Bared in Court Clashes

Los Angeles, June 24 (AP)—Money, says Myrtle Joan St. Pierre, is not her main desire in the $200,000 breach of promise suit against David Hutton, singer husband of the evangelist, Aimee Semple McPherson.

"All I want to do now is to show that man up in a big way," she told her friends today.

The husky Hutton, a baritone, doesn't think a verdict will be given against him, but said if it were, he had no money to pay.

Just when the cross-examination of Miss St. Pierre will end had court stiches guessing as the defendant stood on the rightful prerogative of a woman and refused to be out-talked.

BITTER EXCHANGES

The cross-examination yesterday brought bitter exchanges between Miss St. Pierre's counsel and the defense, forcing Superior Judge Lester Roth to take a hand in the proceedings.

"Did you kiss Mr. Hutton?" asked Mark Jones, one of the defense attorneys.

"He kissed me," was the nurse's answer.

"And you're sure you didn't kiss him?"

"When a person is kissed on the mouth by another person, both of them are kissing and being kissed," was the rejoinder, which brought a warning from the court that the giggling spectators would be ordered out after another giggle.

She told how they sat on her divan and David poured out his love for her and tried to put his arms around her, and how she resisted and he bent low and caressed her hands. But she denied she was in love with him then, believing him only a "nice, pleasing gentleman."

PROPOSAL CHARGED.

Later in her testimony the said the profession of love, born within a week of their meeting, grew into proposal of marriage. Then Hutton tried to kiss her and she warned him, "we must not have any more of these intimacies."

Hutton announced he expected to call Victor McLaglen, film star, as a witness, but his attorneys said they knew nothing of it.

The singer also said he might bring Pietro Gentile opera singer, to the stand. Gentile was in court. Miss St. Pierre learned of the declarations and said:

"Victor was a good patient of mine and I knew Mr. Gentile well. I know they can say nothing against me."

THOUSANDS TO TAKE PART IN EXERCISES

300,000 Men Hear Papal Legate in Feature of the Church Session

Dublin, June 24 (AP)—Overshadowing all else on the program of the Eucharistic Congress today was the mass meeting of women to be held tonight in Phoenix Park.

For the thousands of women attending the congress it will mark the climax of their special activities and, except for a difference in hymns and sermons, will be a counterpart of last night's mass meeting of men. Except for the clergy, only women will attend.

The carefully planned service will be one of singular beauty. It will include singing by a picked choir of 300 voices, carried over the acres-large congregation by loud speakers.

DAY FOR CHILDREN

The presiding prelate is the Papal legate, Cardinal Lauri, and at the close of the meeting all women were to be asked to stand as he passed among the congregation.

During the day the various sectional and national meetings continued in various Dublin halls. This morning a solemn pontifical high mass was celebrated in the pro-cathedral.

Tomorrow will be children's day. At noon the children will assemble in Phoenix Park for a meeting similar to that held for their parents.

Three hundred thousand men, bareheaded in the soft Dublin dusk, attended last night's great meeting in the park and listened to Cardinal Lauri.

ERIN KEEPS FAITH.

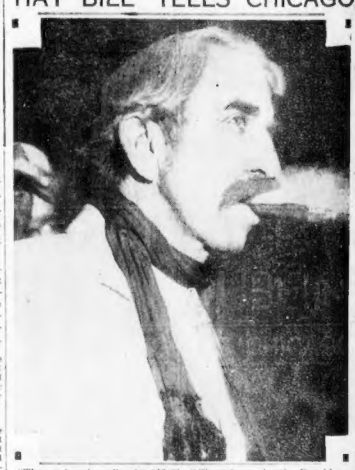
Flanking the high altar at the outdoor ceremony were lesser prelates, and on a special white and gold throne sat the legate, attired in his red robes.

Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis, speaking in English, said that other nations have lost the faith and kept their cathedrals, but Ireland has lost her cathedrals, but kept her faith."

Cardinal Lauri said he brought a "very special and a great benediction" from the Pope.

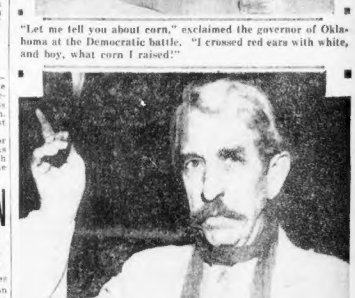
"I am more than pleased at this privilege to be present at this tremendous assembly of men," he added.

'HAY BILL' TELLS CHICAGO



"Then take plows," said Alfalfa Bill, as he seeks the Presidential nomination. "I know plows. Politics? Phew!"

"Let me tell you about corn," exclaimed the governor of Oklahoma at the Democratic battle. "I crossed red ears with white, and boy, what corn I raised!"



Alfalfa Bill talks overalls, rivers, farming—anything, but politics. He's off that——till the time comes, then watch out!

HELD FOR SHOTS AT POLICEMAN

Metropolis Elysses, 20, of Tyler st., South End, was arraigned in municipal court today on charges of robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon on a police officer. He was held in $5000 for hearing July 1.

Patrolman Elmer Ogstrom told Judge Good that Elysses held up the manager of the Globe Theater last Wednesday night and escaped with $60. During the chase Elysses is alleged by police to have fired at Patrolman Ogstrom.

Elysses was arrested on a Harvard st. fire escape, and $60 was found on him. A revolver, with two exploded shells, was found underneath the fire escape, police said.

Alfalfa Gives the Lowdown— Yeah, on What Isn't

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Chicago, June 24 (INS)—"Now take overalls," Gov. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray said, placing two large feet on a table and a cigar in his mouth.

"It's too hot, Governor. How do you stand on . . ."

"No, take overalls. I sold overalls down in Brazil when it was hotter than this. American overalls are the best in the world. After three months down there I had 'em all wearing American overalls."

"Yes, but Governor, who is your second choice for . . ."

"Then take plows." Alfalfa Bill waved a cigar toward a thousand imaginary plows. "Nothing like American plows. I sold 'em in South America.

PLOW MAKES A KING

"I came across Indians down there who were raising large crops and they never heard of a plow. I found an Indian in Brazil who owned an ax, a spade and a houn' dog. I sold him a plow, taught him how to use it, and in one year he was the wealthiest farmer for miles around. Great market, South America. It's time we really went after it."

"Now, Governor, Jim Farley says that Roosevelt . . ."

"Let me tell you about corn." The governor of Oklahoma spat quite expertly into a brass cuspidor eight feet away. "Corn down my way wasn't so good. I figured, 'we got to grow better corn than this.' Now, about then I am interested in the Mendel theory. I figured, 'why can't you breed corn like scientists do mice?'

"I got some good red corn and crossed it with our Oklahoma white corn. According to the Mendel theory every three in four ears should be of the dominating species. Well, every three turned out to be red corn. I crossed that with other white corn and in three years I had bred nicest ears of corn a man ever ate."

BOY, IT WAS CORN!

"Would you accept the vice-presidency if . . ."

"They called it Murray corn and fine corn it was, too, I know a lot about corn."

"Now Governor, about prohibition. Do . . ."

"There's a river down there in South America that's 3000 miles long that ain't even in our geographies. I went up that river—a great river. I sold seed, machines there to the natives."

"But Governor . . ."

The Governor of Oklahoma wound a brown scarf a bit more tightly about his neck.

"Oh, politics!" He dismissed politics with a wave of his cigar which scattered two inches of ash on the carpet. "There's too damn much talking going on about politics. Now that river down there . . ."

CANN CAN PAY, OR IT'S JAIL

Salem, June 24—Gerald Cann of Peabody can remain in jail until he feels he can pay Mrs. Cann $18 a week for herself and a little Cann named Harold.

He was in probate court today for failure to pay the money as stipulated in his wife's separate support decree.

"I can't," said Cann. "I can only support my aged father."

"You can," said Judge Dow. "Your wife and child come first."

And he said Cann can go to jail until he decided he would pay.

TEACHERS' PAY HELD BACK

At a meeting of the Somerville board of aldermen last night, it was voted to change an ordinance which cut off the teachers from receiving their July pay which they expected to receive with their June salary.

Alderman George Moran said the school committee was of the "sneakiest kind" and Alderman John M. Lynch, after saying that the "poor taxpayers" should be considered, said that if the "teachers need the money they should borrow it off the loan sharks."

Mayor Murphy and City Auditor Francis J. Daley pleaded with the board to appropriate more money to the interest account so that the interest on the borrowed money could be paid. As a result the sum of $30,000 was appropriated to interest account to take care of future payments on borrowed money. Several additional traffic lights were ordered installed.

BLAST MENACES FIREFIGHTERS

Spontaneous combustion is believed to have caused a fire that caused about $25,000 damage last night in the Coggan & Sherman hardware store, Malden sq., Malden.

The fire started in the oil room of the store within a half-hour after the store had closed for the day. The flaming oil spread the flames so rapidly that the interior of the store was an inferno upon the arrival of firemen.

Hot air and oil explosions, combined with the fumes of burning chemicals prevented firemen from entering the blazing store for a half-hour after the arrival of apparatus. The first hot-air explosion blew out three skylights in the store with a roar that could be heard all over Malden.

Firemen eventually drowned out the fire which had ruined practically the entire stock of the store.

Big Cougar Leaps at Automobile

Goldendale, Wash., June 24 — George Nickerson driving home late at night, experienced a strange adventure when a large cougar attacked his car on the Bloodgood rd., four miles north of Goldendale.

The animal struck the side of the car with great momentum, screaming and clawing as it struck. This impact of the cougar's body caused Nickerson's light car to swerve but he did not lose control.

Mother Held for Receiving Loot

Mrs. Margaret R. DeAngelis, 35, of First st., Medford, mother of two children, was arrested by Back Bay police after $477 worth of furniture was seized in a vacant tenement at 1 Vassar st., Medford.

Mrs. DeAngelis was charged with receiving stolen goods.

3 TAGGED OFTEN LOSE LICENSES

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan Ryan aided Boston police today for the first time in auto tagging cases, suspending for indefinite terms the licenses of three persons for violation of the parking regulations.

The persons affected are Ahmd B. Cook, Summit ave., Winthrop; Morris Weinbaum, Winchester st., Brookline, and John A. Kelley, Mallon st., Dorchester.

Weinbaum's car was tagged 24 times last year, but the courts demanded that the police prove he actually parked the car himself. He finally pleaded guilty to two counts in Superior Court and was fined $100.

At hearings before the registrar Deputy Supt. Goode said Weinbaum had ignored three tags this year.

Kelly received 47 tags last year, pleaded guilty to only one of the cases in superior court and was fined $50. Police could not pin the other cases on him. This year he has ignored nine notifications, the police said.

Kelley's counsel declared at the registrar's hearing that it was a case of "police prosecution."

The third case involved the automobile of Mrs. Florence Cook. It was tagged three times and none of the tags was returned. A fourth tag was returned with a letter in which the police were told "the operator respectfully declines to give any information."

As a result of a hearing held at the registry, the authorities were satisfied that Mrs. Cook's husband did the illegal parking.

CITY WILL DROP 160 WORKERS

Publication of Civil Service lists of those who passed examinations for positions as rodmen in the municipal service will cause the discharge of 160 temporary employes in city departments Thursday, Mayor Curley said today.

The majority of those who will lose their jobs are men who have held well-paid positions and who through ill fortune were compelled to appeal to the mayor for work. With the publication of the lists the mayor is required by law to drop them.

Mountain to Be Flaming Torch on 4th

Mount Washington, N. H., June 24 (INS)—Before an audience of people of four northern New England states and ships at sea, Mount Washington, whose lofty peak reaches 6000 feet into the air, will become a "flaming torch" on the night of July 2 in a gigantic fireworks display, according to plans revealed today.

The spectacular illumination of New England's highest mountain peak will be "fired" by a signal from Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire in a dual ceremony marking the dedication of the new Mount Washington Club and in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

STAGE SET FOR ELY WEDDING

East Brady, Pa., June 24 (INS)—Preparations were completed today for the wedding tomorrow of Miss Louise Ludwick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Ludwick, to Richard B. Ely, son of Governor and Mrs. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. H. T. Chisholm, pastor of the East Brady Presbyterian Church, at the home of the bride.

WALSH, GERRY, N. E. FOLK BUSY AT CHICAGO

Chicago, June 24 (AP)—Although the New England delegations to the Democratic national convention are not due here until tomorrow and Sunday, several of the States have been represented in the early arrivals and the advance meetings of the platform committee, which began sessions yesterday.

U. S. Senator Peter G. Gerry of Rhode Island, member of the resolutions committee for his state, was on hand.

Dr. Samuel T. Ladd, former mayor of Portsmouth, N. H., and an alternate, was temporarily assigned to the place of Robert C. Murchie of Concord, N. H., as that state's member of the platform committee.

WALSH ON PLATFORM.

U. S. Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts also held a place on the platform committee, although the Massachusetts delegation organization has not been completed.

Robert L. Jackson of New Hampshire, secretary of the national committee, was on hand and predicted an early nomination for Franklin D. Roosevelt and organization of the convention by Roosevelt forces.

He was at the Congress hotel, headquarters of the committee and presidential candidacies, and was taking part in many conferences.

Interest of the Massachusetts delegation centered about Mrs. Nelle Sullivan of Fall River. While the Massachusetts delegation is pledged to Smith, Mrs. Sullivan, a national committeewoman, was on hand at the Roosevelt headquarters working in the interest of the New York governor.

UP FOR RE-ELECTION

Mrs. Sullivan, who has served as a committeewoman since women have had a place on the national committee, finds her term expiring as convention time approaches but expects to be re-elected.

The Roosevelt camp has another active woman worker from Fall River, Mrs. Louis McHenry Howe, whose husband is aiding in the Roosevelt campaign, and whose son, Hartley Howe, is active in the interests of the New York governor.

20-Gallon Hat in Ring for Garner

Chicago, June 24 (INS)—The hat that's going to be tossed into the ring in behalf of the presidential candidacy of Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, made its appearance in Chicago today in the possession of Ed Hickey, of San Antonio.

It is a 20-gallon affair with a two-foot brim spread, and bears the signatures of 402 members of the House of Representatives.

A subsidiary hat contains the autographs of all 96 Senators and every member of President Hoover's cabinet.

"I'm going to toss them in after all the other hats have been thrown," Hickey declared. "They will cover the others."

FIGHT LOOMS ON TARIFF PLANK

Chicago, June 24 (INS)—A threefold program to smash international trade barriers and revive world commerce was drafted today by the Democratic Senate bloc for presentation to the party's unofficial platform committee.

The program would place the party on record as advocating:

An international economic conference on the world's leading financial, commercial and industrial authorities to restore normal exchange, monetary and trade relations.

Reciprocal trade agreements between America and foreign commercial competitors, based on mutual trade concessions.

Slashing of American tariffs by Congress, acting with the aid of a fact-finding commission, after abandoning the present flexible tariff provision.

This economic plank will be presented by Senator Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, with support of other senatorial representatives on the platform committee. It will be a part of the Senate bloc's demand for a concentration of economic issues as a means of avoiding warfare on the prohibition issue.

Fearful of starting the wet and dry war too soon, the committee postponed action on the prohibition plank indefinitely.

Receiver Appointed

Providence, June 24—A temporary receiver for the Woonsocket Spinning Company was appointed yesterday.

2 THIRDS FIGHT AIDS GARNER

Chicago, June 24 (INS)—Leaders in the Franklin D. Roosevelt camp privately admitted today former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and William G. McAdoo, who fought each other to the bitter end in 1924, stand between the New York Governor and the Democratic presidential nomination.

While insisting they now have sufficient votes to abrogate the two-thirds rule and pave the way for nomination of the New York executive by a majority, the Roosevelt forces are fearful Smith and McAdoo may be able to block abolition of the century old two-thirds rule.

If Smith goes on the convention floor and, in a vigorous speech, withdraws as a candidate, the Roosevelt leaders are afraid s he may cut down their majority vote.

The Roosevelt people admit McAdoo has a big following in the Southern states and hesitate to think what may happen if he joins hands with Smith in a floor fight against abrogation of the two-thirds rule.

Friends of McAdoo believe this also would give him a fine opportunity to further his fight for Speaker John N. Garner for the nomination.

STORM SINKS BOAT, KILLS BABY GIRL

A schooner tied up at a Charlestown wharf was found on its side on the bottom of the Little Mystic river today, another result of the savage and freaky storm which swept over eastern Massachusetts, causing one death and considerable property damage.

The craft, which capsized after filling with water, is the Marguerite, a one-master, berthed at the foot of Lexington st. No one was aboard. The vessel came from Eastport, Me., several months ago and has been here since.

BABY IS CRUSHED

Other additions to the list of storm damage included the falling of a large elm on the Knights of Columbus clubhouse at Green st. and Rockview ave., Jamaica Plain.

In Attleboro the storm ripped a limb from a tree and flung it across the baby carriage bearing 15-month-old Catherine Tracy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Tracy, fatally injuring the child. Mr. and Mrs. Tracy and another child with them were unhurt.

Paul Comeau and Samuel Madonna, both of Shirley st., Winthrop, were rescued by a lobster fisherman after being swept from their raft 400 yards off Winthrop beach. Eugene LaCouse, of the Winthrop Yacht Club, rescued Henry Sodergren, 25, of the Chelsea Yacht Club, when the latter's sailboat was tossed onto Apple Island and demolished.

MANY WIRES DOWN

The high wind caused heavy damage to trees and wires in Belmont, Chelsea, Lynn, Revere Winthrop, Everett, Watertown, Waltham and Quincy and as far north as Reading and Concord.

Electric wires were torn down by falling trees and in many sections, darkness reigned until squads of emergency workers repaired the damage.

The storm also raged along the Cape and reports from there indicate that Hyannis was hardest hit. All lights in the eastern section of the town were extinguished and the Cape Cod Hospital was in darkness for some time.

CRAFT ON WAY TO BOTTOM

Schooner Marguerite is shown off Lexington st. wharf, Charlestown, just before she turned over and plunged to the bottom of the Little Mystic river during the freaky storm yesterday. No one was aboard the craft, which came from Eastport, Me., some time ago. (Staff photo.)

Sunken Ship Yields $2,500,000 Treasure

Brest, France, June 24 (AP)—About $2,500,000 in bars of gold and silver had been brought up from the treasure room of the sunken liner Egypt when divers of the salvage ship Artiglio II resumed work today.

Twenty-two cases of treasure were added to the $1,000,000 total yesterday.

Autoist Is Sought After Fatal Crash

Belfast, Me., June 24—The sheriff's department and the State police are on a hunt for the driver of a coupe, said to have a California license, which forced one of the trucks of Downie Bros.' circus off the road, near Grange Hall, in Lincolnville, causing the truck to overturn, killing one man and injuring three others.

B. E. Chandler of Macon Ga., was the man killed.

TAXI MEN SEEK TO END WAR

Moves by several of the larger taxi companies to end the present rate war by establishment of a higher minimum rate than is now in force has met a checkmate in Police Commissioner Hultman in a demand by the latter for proof that the present minimum rate is unfair.

Cab company officials are now compiling data for Hultman in an attempt to show that he should boost the minimum rate.

Several months ago these same companies dropped their rates to the minimum allowed and one company asked Hultman to establish an even lower minimum rate than now in force. The new low rates on which they are running is losing money for them, they claim.

Henry DeFrancesca, president of the I. T. O. A., declared that many of its owners who drive their own cabs are lucky to clear a dollar for a day's work above expenses.

BOY RESCUED FROM DITCH

A water-filled ditch which has been a menace to the safety of Wellaston children for months yesterday nearly claimed the life of Robert Paulin, 2½-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Paulin of 81 Franklin st. The boy stumbled into the ditch and would have drowned in 15 feet of water had his cries not been heard by Patrolman Joseph Belanger, a neighbor, who rescued him.

The ditch was left in a vacant lot in Franklin st. when building operations were abandoned and it is nearly concealed by a heavy growth of grass along its edges.

FLOW OF FUNDS SEEN BY G. O. P.

Washington, June 24 (AP)—The White House today stirred with political activity as President Hoover and his aids engaged in a busy round of conferences.

Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican national committee, conferred with White House aids and reported he felt more optimistic over the collection of campaign funds.

Nutt said he believed the prohibition plank would aid in obtaining contributions.

He mentioned Silas Strawn of Chicago as possible chairman for campaign contributions in Illinois, and said he hoped to obtain the services of Jeremiah Milbank of New York as eastern treasurer.

Little effort will be made to collect funds in the South, he said.

Old Adams Home in Quincy to Be Razed

Destruction of the old 22-room Charles Francis Adams mansion at Mune rd. and Dimmock st. in the President Hill section of Quincy, scene of many elaborate social functions at which men of prominence in national affairs were entertained, has started.

The house was built in 1868 by the son of Charles Francis Adams, son of President John Quincy Adams and ambassador to England.

Worcester Girl to Wed Annapolis Man Despite Ban

Worcester, June 24—The prospective ruling of the Naval Department which would ban marriage among its future admirals at the Naval Academy and among officers just getting out of the school, does not worry Miss Grace Elizabeth Gabriel of Tahanto rd., Bradford College graduate, whose parents announced her engagement to John Starr Coyne of Berkley, Cal.

Coyne is a member of the 1933 class at Annapolis, but the couple expect to be married before the new rule becomes effective.

Women Accuse Wall St. Brokers

Washington, June 24—Two soft-spoken women today accused Wall st. brokerage houses of having shorn them in stock deals and asked the Senate Banking and Currency Committee for future protection from what one termed "The New York Stock Yard."

Miss Grace Van Brunn Roberts, Highlands, N. Y., social leader, said the stock exchange not only tolerates "but condones frauds when committed by its prominent and influential members."

Miss Annie Gushee, employed in a Cheyenne, Wyo., bank, told how she had lost all her savings.

HITLER SEEKING MARTIAL LAW

Munich, Bavaria, June 24 (AP)—Adolh Hitler, in a public declaration issued from Nazi headquarters today demanded establishment of martial law throughout Germany as a result of political clashes which this week have cost ten lives.

He also demanded the Communist party be suppressed and that the police, especially those in Prussia, be purged of Socialist and Centrist members.

"The hour is at hand," he warned, "it is five minutes before twelve."

Paris Singer Dies Suddenly Abroad

London, June 24 (AP)—Paris Singer, member of a well-known American family, died suddenly here last night. He had come to London to consult a heart specialist.

Mr. Singer, who had made his European home on the Riviera for some time, was a brother of Washington Singer, who owned Orwell, favorite in the recent Derby.

Traffic Halts When Ducklings Step Out for Stroll

When a duck and her brood of 15 ducklings decided to cross Lynnfield st., near the Lynnfield line, at noon yesterday, motorists had to sit and wait—for about five minutes.

The ducklings became frightened while en route from one to another of the two ponds on opposite sides of the road, and refused to stay together despite the vigorous tactics of their mother. An irritated motorist further complicated the situation by blowing his horn.

Patrolman William Ripley of the Lynn police department happened along and provided the brood with a uniformed escort.

Beer Raid in South End; One Arrest

Crashing into a tenement in Shawmut ave., South End, yesterday, where they claim a number of men and women were sitting at tables drinking home brew, police of East Dedham st. station seized 71 quarts of beer and arrested Martin Le Blanc, 36.

GARNER RELIEF TO CONFERENCE

Washington, June 24 (AP)—The House today sent to conference with the Senate the $2,300,000,000 Garner-Wagner relief bill.

Negotiations will begin immediately in an effort to reach a compromise on differences between the two houses.

The Senate passed the Wagner bill yesterday, while the House approved the Garner measure some time ago.

Speaker Garner appointed as House conferees Chairman Collier of the ways and means committee, Representatives Crisp of Georgia, Ramey of Illinois, Democrats; Treadway of Massachusetts and Bacharach of New Jersey, Republicans.

Senate conferees named yesterday are Chairman Norbeck of the banking committee and Senators Brookhart, Iowa, Republicans, and Wagner of New York, Democrat.

RIVALS DIFFER ON DELEGATES' CLAIMS

Chicago, June 25—Here are the rival first ballot voting claims of the Roosevelt and Smith managers in the Democratic national convention:

	Roosevelt	Smith
Roosevelt	588	570
Smith	94	138
Garner	80	90
Senator Lewis	58	58
Ex-Senator Reed	36	36
Gov. White	52	52
Ex-Gov. Byrd	24	24
Gov. Murray	23	22
Gov. Ritchie	16	16
Doubtful	173	148
Total	1154	1154

Two-thirds necessary for nomination, 778.

Bare majority, 578.

ing candidates, including William Gibbs McAdoo.

Assurances that California will stand behind Speaker Garner were understood to have been given Smith by McAdoo, and the New Yorker contacted Texas leaders in an effort to make sure the Lone Star state will back their choice to the finish.

The youth of America will throw its tremendous influence to a third party unless the Democrats adopt an acceptable platform on economic issues, including repeal or modification of prohibition, Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, youthful Chicago University president, told the unofficial Democratic platform committee today.

Hutchins urged adoption of a platform, calling for reduction of tariff restriction of Federal bureaucracy, reduction of federal expenditures, limitation of soldier relief to wartime disabilities and a change in the dry law.

SPEECH APPLAUDED

"Unless the Democratic party writes a platform acceptable on these economic issues," Hutchins warned, "a third party will be organized to get the vote of the youth of America.

"The Democratic party has the greatest opportunity in its history to enlist the younger people under its banner. There is a youth movement in our nation that will assert itself in the coming campaign. If the Democratic party wants the tremendous and enduring support of the younger generation, it must adopt a clear and unequivocal position on these pressing issues.

"The Republican platform," he added, "while the Democrats smiled, brought no response in our hearts. It gave us no promise of relief."

The Democrats enthusiastically applauded Hutchins, who had only two minutes in which to speak. Senator Hull of Tennessee and William G. McAdoo of California joined in obtaining an extension of time for his remarks.

Prof. R. W. Gaston and Robert C. Rand, who preceded Hutchins, advocated a program calling for reduction of the tariff, repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and modification of the veterans' allowances.

GLASS, MURRAY PROTEST

The drive by Roosevelt men to abrogate the two-thirds rule brought a sharp attack today from Senator Glass of Virginia, Secretary of the Treasury in the Wilson Cabinet.

Governor Murray of Oklahoma added his protest saying a abrogation would mean defeat of Roosevelt and possibly a third party.

Anti-Roosevelt people — whether they favored Smith, Garner, Ritchie, Baker, Byrd, White, Traylor, Reed or Murray—all had the same answer to the Roosevelt proposal:

"To abrogate the rule is all right for the future. But you can't change the rules during the game to benefit one particular player."

Senator Cordell Hull of Tennessee, a Roosevelt supporter, on the other hand said the convention should be prepared for majority action if "a small minority attempted to start a wrecking movement." By that phrase he meant "wrecking Roosevelt."

OPPOSED BY TAMMANY

John F. Curry, boss of Tammany Hall, who has two New York candidates for the nomination on his hands, served notice on the Roosevelt managers he would fight their proposal "to the last ditch."

Josett Shouse, Chairman of the Democratic executive committee, upon whose election as permanent chairman will center the first test of strength of the Roosevelt forces, said it would be wholly unfair to abrogate the two-thirds rule without also abolishing the unit rule.

Shouse is supported for the permanent chairmanship by opponents of Roosevelt. The forces of the New York governor favor Senator Walsh of Montana for the place.

UNIT RULE MUST STAND

Shouse said the unit rule could not be abolished for the present convention because delegations already have begun to arrive with instructions from their states to vote under the unit rule.

Rep. Rayburn, head of the Texas Garner-for-President forces, arrived today to take active charge of the Speaker's campaign for the presidential nomination and declared he was opposed to the abrogation of the two-thirds rule.

"Americans have been bred to believe it unfair to change the rules in the middle of the game," Rayburn said.

"Mr. Roosevelt was one of the men in supreme command of the forces which nominated Mr. Smith at Houston in 1928. He placed his name in nomination, and he was in constant counsel and direction of the campaign. If Mr. Roosevelt believes so strongly in the violation of the two-thirds rule then as his campaign committee professes to believe in it now, why did he not use the overwhelming majority Governor Smith had there to recommend to this convention the change so that during the four-year interim, notice to change the rule could have been given."

Rayburn said he doubted very much whether Speaker Garner would come to the convention.

Opposition was also voiced by former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri.

"The rule was good enough for Andrew Jackson and it should be good enough for 1932," Reed said. "I think it is a very grave step."

Meanwhile, James A. Farley, head of the Roosevelt forces, went confidently ahead with plans for bringing to the floor the fight to abrogate the rule.

Farley announced that J. Bruce Kremer of Montana, choice of the Roosevelt forces for chairman of the rules committee, will lead the fight.

Farley was asked if he had "counted noses" of the delegates on the proposed change and replied:

"We wouldn't have made the move unless we had been sure of our ground."

Everything now points to next week's national convention witnessing a fight just as intense and bitter as that of eight years ago in Madison Sq. Garden, New York, although probably it will be settled in fewer rounds.

The blunt warning by Al Smith, speaking through his floor manager, Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, that Franklin D. Roosevelt cannot win in November if nominated, has started real hostilities. The statement characterized Roosevelt as "the weakest man" before the convention.

It was a warning, also, that if Roosevelt is nominated Smith and his friends will "go fishing" in November and leave it to the South and West to try to put him over. It was a warning, too, that the Roosevelt candidacy can expect little financial assistance from the Eastern money bags.

The Smith-Hague statement was as sensational as any ever issued on the eve of a national convention. Rival candidates have been bitter in other conventions, but even at Madison Square Garden, Smith did not proclaim from the housetops that his rival, William Gibbs McAdoo, could not be elected if nominated.

"ROOSEVELT HOOVER HOPE"

After pointing to Roosevelt's demonstrated weakness in the primaries in the large centers of population, the statement continued:

"It is commonly known that Republican leaders are hoping that Roosevelt will be the nominee and some have publicly expressed themselves that their only hope for victory lies in the possibility of Roosevelt becoming the candidate."

Although there was no mention of Smith's elimination in this contest, his manager's statement amounted virtually to an offer to withdraw if Roosevelt would, for further down it said:

SMITH MIGHT QUIT.

"I have always been an advocate of former Governor Smith. Entirely aside from my personal desire to see him given the leadership, I want to call attention to the fact that there is a wealth of material before the convention—Governor Ritchie, Melvin A. Traylor, John N. Garner, Newton D. Baker, Governor White, Governor Murray, Senator Reed, Governor Byrd and Senator Lewis, any one of whom meets the present situation better than the Governor of New York."

That sounded about as plainly as anything could the Smith tocsin:

"Anybody but Roosevelt."

It was regarded as significant that Ritchie's name led all the rest in the Smith-Hague list of available timber.

Gov. Ritchie arrived today and was met at the station by several thousand people who joined in a parade through hthe city to his Congress Hotel headquarters.

Frana Scofield, who heads the movement for Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago banker, fell into line behind the Smith-Hague statement.

"I quite agree," he said. "Democratic success in November can be achieved only by winning some of those state which have large Republican voting power and to do this we must select an outstanding man who can command these votes."

'All U. S. Needs Is Wisdom'—Baruch

Chicago, June 24 (INS)—An appeal to the Democratic national convention to adopt a platform assuring emergency legislation for relief of unemployment, agriculture and repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment was made today by Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier and Democratic leader.

Declaring the country needs only "wisdom and courage" to lift it out of the present period of economic adversity, Baruch said:

"We must first make ourselves strong, and we can do that, for this country has everything. All it needs is wisdom and courage."

"No! Mrs. Murray won't be here. She don't wanta get into this bunch of hoodlums!"

Threat to Bar Smith on Convention Floor

Nashville, Tenn., June 24 (AP)—J. M. Gardenhire, a delegate to the Democratic national convention, announced today he would sponsor a resolution to deny former Gov. Alfred E. Smith the privileges of the convention floor and to declare him ineligible as a presidential candidate "unless and until he assures the delegates that he will abide the action of the convention and support its nominee."

Gardenhire, counselor general of Tennessee and a Smith supporter four years ago, issued a statement, attacking the former governor for his "remarkable interview" in Chicago, declining to say whether or not he would support the nominee for President.

"The Democrats of the nation," Gardenhire added, "must have been amazed and shocked" at the interview.

"All Over After First Ballot," Says Huey Long

Chicago, June 24 (AP)—Senator Huey Long of Louisiana today said he had made reservations to leave Chicago for his home State next Wednesday night, because "it'll be all over after the first ballot and

Asked about the vice-presidential nomination, he said:

"We'll see about that, but the shouting will be over after the first ballot on the Presidency."

Roosevelt to Speak on Two-Thirds Rule Fight

Albany, June 24 (INS)—Retiring to his study in the executive mansion, Governor Roosevelt today refused to see newspapermen who sought to learn his reaction to the assertion of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City that Roosevelt could not be elected if nominated.

It was reported that Roosevelt, later in the day, may have something to say about abolition of the two-thirds rule at the Chicago convention. So far, however, he has left all comments on convention subjects to his spokesmen at Chicago.

Democratic Victory Fund Near Goal

Chicago, June 24 (AP)—State leaders in the victory fund drive of the Democrats reported today that $719,587 of the $1,000,000 campaign fund goal had been raised.

An additional $200,000 was promised the party for expenses of the convention, bringing the grand total to $919,586.

Numerous party leaders assembled at the meeting arranged for presentation of the reports of those who had led the state drives.

PLANK TO BOOST SILVER ASKED

Washington, June 24—A Democratic platform plank expressing determination to adhere to the gold standard but recognizing that the value of silver should be increased in relation to gold has been prepared by Representative Somers (D) of New York.

Somers said the proposal had been submitted to John McCooey, Brooklyn Democratic leader, who is slated for membership on the resolutions committee.

The suggested plank follows several months of hearings before the House coinage committee, of which Somers is chairman, on methods to stabilize silver prices. Somers added:

"My plank would recognize that conditions in Europe and the Orient are such that there is a terrific need to do something to increase purchasing power there. It sets forth that this can best be accomplished by increasing the value of silver."

JUDGE, POLICE DEFEND 'HIGH HAT' TRIAL

"Just a misunderstanding."

Thus did Judge Sanborn and Police Chief Wragg of Dedham come to the defense of Associate Justice E. Dwight Fullerton of Dedham today after Registrar Ryan charged a "sunrise session" of court was given Joseph B. Russell, Jr., Westwood millionaire and Harvard graduate, yesterday.

Russell was arrested for drunkenness as he drove through Dedham early yesterday.

He failed to appear in court at 9 a. m. and a perusal of police records showed the notation "Judge Fullerton held court in the police station."

Hearing of the incident through one of his inspectors, Registrar Ryan hurried to Dedham for an investigation of what he termed a "high-hat" procedure.

WENT AS A FRIEND

Justice Fullerton said today that he called at the police station as a friend and because he thought Russell may have wanted legal advice.

"When I arrived at the station Russell had already been admitted to bail and was responsible to no one but the judge of the district court at 9 o'clock."

Judge Sanborn, who declared Russell in default yesterday but declined to issue a capias, said Dedham police agreed to a continuance until July 1 after he suggested to Justice Fullerton that he get such an agreement.

"When Justice Fullerton called me on the 'phone I told him if the officers would agree to a continuance Mr. Russell could appear July 1," he said. "I said I would have to declare a default but would not issue a capias because I knew Mr. Russell would not run away.

CHIEF EXPLAINS

Chief Wragg denied court had been held in the police station and said the booking officer misunderstood the meeting between Russell and Justice Fullerton. The booking officer was Patrolman Stephen Muirhead.

The charge was drunkenness only, Chief Wragg explained, because of the law that a complaint must be sought in court for drunken driving.

Russell could not be found today.

BANK WINS AGED HOME BATTLE

Salem, June 24—Francis Hurley, master, decided today the Salem Five Cents Savings Bank has a right to evict Mrs. Blanche W. Green, Gold Star mother, who conducts Comfort Home for Aged Women at Marblehead.

Mrs. Green will carry her fight to the Supreme Court, however, and pending a decision will probably remain in possession of the home.

Hurley said she violated an agreement to pay $16 a week on a mortgage held by the bank. He could find no evidence that the bank had agreed not to molest her this year. Mrs. Green has had the aid of the American Legion in her fight and declared she was chiefly interested in protecting four elderly women inmates, who would have to go to the poorhouse.

Drastic Penalties for Threat Writers

Washington, June 24 (AP)—The Senate today amended and passed the Cochran House bill to punish sending threatening letters through the mails and ordered conferees named to speed action so that it might be enacted soon. The bill provides sentences up to 20 years and fines of $5000.

REED, DARROW FAVOR QUICK DRY REPEAL

Chicago, June 24 (INS)—Former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, a contestant for the Democratic presidential nomination, and Clarence Darrow, the famous criminal lawyer, agreed today that Congress should immediately repeal the Volstead act, turning the prohibition enforcement instantly back to the states under theEighteenth Amendment.

Reed and Darrow disclosed their views on the prohibition problem to each other during an unofficial debate in the former Senator's apartment here. An International News reporter was a member of the privileged audience.

REED FOR REPEAL

The "debate" follows:

REED—"Clarence, that was a great speech you made against prohibition down in Kansas City. I'll never forget one pungent statement you made."

DARROW—"What was that, Senator?"

REED—"You said there was one thing about prohibition you liked—it couldn't be enforced."

DARROW—"Well, it can't be. What do you think we ought to do about it?

REED—"We Democrats ought to adopt a straight-forward, plain-spoken platform demanding repeal of the 18th Amendment. We ought to preface that with a statement about the economic losses of prohibition and the crime it has saddled upon our people and declare it a failure, because it should never have been placed in the constitution. We should revert to state's rights and let the states control the problem. We should demand, courageously, its repeal."

14 DRY STATES

DARROW (slowly)—"But senator, neither you nor I will live to see it repealed. It will take 40 or 50 years to get it out of the Constitution."

REED—"I don't agree with you, Clarence. I think its possible. I used to think as you do, but the other night I sat down and marked a map as I thought the states would vote on repeal. I put down all the irremediably dry states and all the irremediably wet states and all those I thought were wet. And Clarence, I had only 14 dry states."

DARROW—"You'd only need two mained—wee an repeal it."

REED—"Yes, sir. Now, if the Democratic party would adopt a real plank, advocating state's rights as the party has upheld that doctrine from the days of Thomas Jefferson down to the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, — putting the problem of liquor control directly back in the hands of the States, where it should have remained—we can repeal it."

DARROW—"I hope you're right. But, what can we do in the meantime? I have advocated immediate repeal of the Volstead Act. If Congress did that and refused to appropriate any more money for enforcement, the problem would be returned to the states under the Eighteenth Amendment, which gives the states concurrent power to enforce prohibition. The Federal Government isn't really under any obligation to enforce a law that can't be enforced."

NEEDED REVENUE

REED—"Of course, if Congress repealed the Volstead act, the whole question of the control of liquor would be thrown back into the laps of the states. And if Congress were to levy an excise tax upon liquor, which it defined as non-intoxicating, the Government would receive a tremendous revenue. At the same time, the states could secure a revenue by adopting a scheme which might be described as a negative enforcement act. To illustrate, the State of Iowa passed a law proposing a fine of $1000 every 90 days for violations of the prohibition law. It was imposed only once in 90 days. That sort of law did not recognize the validity of the business. It was thought by prohibitionists that it did not make the Government a partner in crime. Nevertheless, it permitted regulation of the liquor traffic and secured revenue to the state."

DARROW—"That's exactly what I had in mind."

Mice Make Meal of Hoarder's $3000

Nashville, Tenn., June 24—There's one man in Nashville who is convinced hoarding is all wrong.

A Nashville grocer, distrustful of banks, had more than $5,000 in $50 and $100 bills hidden away "in a safe place" in his store.

Mice proceeded to invade the "safe place" and build nests. Their nests were so complete, bankers were able to salvage only about $2,000 from the torn and chewed bits of bills.

Do not confuse this burner with the low-priced burners advertised by ourselves, as well as by others. We have burners at $9.95 if you want them. They are mighty good burners, too, for the money, but in comparison with this burner they stack up like a Ford beside a Lincoln.

Our Regular Price on This Burner Is $39.50.

They have every known new improvement, and there have been so many improvements in the past sixty days that it is impossible to list them in this limited space.

NEW TIDAL WAVE IN MEXICO

Mexico City, June 24 (AP)—Dispatches from Colima today said another earthquake and smaller tidal wave hit Cuyutlan late yesterday, but caused no damage or loss of life, because the town has been evacuated. Yesterday reports placed the death toll of the former tidal wave at 100.

London, Ontario, June 24 (AP)—Henry Quinn, 35, was hanged at the county jail today for the murder last January of Samuel Weinstein in a store hold up.

Dare Washington Put Haggard Heroes Out?

By Elsie Robinson
Author of "Listen World"

Washington, June 24 (INS)—Washington is determined that the B. E. F. shall go.

The B. E. F. is determined that it will stay.

Very simple words—but behind them boils an incredible condition of rage and hysteria on one side and grim and tragic endurance on the other. And daily it grows worse.

This town has the tension of an armed camp. The phrase B. E. F. has become a fighting subject in which every man and woman takes part—more bitter than even religious or political dispute. Yet consider the facts.

Here, quietly encamped, conducting themselves with dignity and decorum—asking no help from Washington charities and receiving none—presenting a perfectly lawful petition in a perfectly lawful manner, are 22,000 of the bravest, cleanest men that America could pick to fight her battles or defend her honor in 1917.

SHATTERED PROMISES

The whole country blessed these men once, sobbed over their sufferings, promised them glorious rewards.

Since then, America has known the greatest prosperity in its history. But these men have not known great prosperity. They returned home with their youth gone, their health impaired, to find their jobs given to others. They have had a hard struggle. While the rest of us were counting our dividends in '29 they were beginning to face desperation. They needed their bonus badly.

Yet, at President Hoover's plea to their patriotism—at his promise that he would arrange an employment program—they agreed to accept half and wait. The world knows what happened. Exactly nothing. Last summer these men starved. Last fall and winter their wives sickened and their babies died from malnutrition. Evicted because they could not pay rent, they roamed the streets like hungry dogs. And now they are here because they have no other place to go.

They have come—as bewildered children come to a parent—to the country which they saved, to which they are still loyal.

AND WASHINGTON MEETS THEM AS IT WOULD MEET LEPERS.

I have seen aristocratic, white-haired ladies in the hotel lobbies spit at the mention of these men!

HEROIC VAGABONDS

I have seen fat senators, on the floors of Congress, glare up at these ragged, gaunt heroes sitting in the galeries, shake their fists, call them vagabonds — bullies — disgraceful parasites!

PARASITES—MEN WHOSE BODIES ARE A MESH OF LIVID SCARS ENDURED FOR THIS COUNTRY . . . WHOSE EYES ARE HAUNTED BY THE HORRORS THEY HAVE WITNESSED IN DEFENSE OF THIS COUNTRY . . . WHOSE RAGGED CHESTS BEAR MEDALS BESTOWED BY THIS COUNTRY. MEDALS FROM A COUNTRY WHICH NOW WILL NOT EVEN GIVE THEM BREAD!

And now the starving wives are marching to join them. And presently the desperate old mothers—mothers of the living and the dead.

One wonders just what names Washington will call the Gold Star mothers . . . what punishment it will mete out to them for having given birth to "bullies and traitors." Will they, I wonder, be permitted to parade past the White House?

Yet, in the face of it all, there has not been one overt act nor one word of threat by the B. E. F. Steadfastly they stick—and on they come.

GET THIS PICTURE

But suppose that by some furious onslaught, Washington were able to drive these men out—what then?

THIRTY OR FORTY THOUSAND MEN . . . HUNGRY, RAGGED, WEAK, WITH SKELETON WIVES AND CHILDREN STAGGERING AT THEIR HEELS . . . DRIVEN BACK OVER THE HIGHWAYS LIKE BEASTS . . . SCATTERED, HOMELESS AND HOPELESS . . . SPREADING THEIR BITTERNESS . . . TELLING THE STORY OF WASHINGTON—

What will happen to America if that occurs? What will happen in the mind of every man, in the heart of every woman, who watches THAT GHASTLY RETREAT?

AND THAT IS GOING TO HAPPEN UNLESS THIS COUNTRY RALLIES BEHIND THESE MEN. THINK IT OVER.

Nova Scotia Visitor Cannot Work Here

A visitor from Nova Scotia cannot take a job here. The question was asked recently in a letter to the question-and-answers editor of the Boston Evening American. Anna C. M. Tillingbast, commissioner of immigration here, today declared a visitor sacrificed his or her status as a visitor as soon as he or she applied for work.

WILL 'THE REVOLUTION' COME WITH BANG OR WHIMPER?

By GILBERT SELDES

IF YOU READ your William Z. Foster, you know that "the revolution" in America will come only with the liquidation of certain governing classes; I am told it will not be anything at all like the riots which began the Russian overthrow. Yet Mr. Lincoln Kirstein, being a novelist as well as a critic, and editor of the non-revolutionary Hound and Horn, is entitled to his vision. If it doesn't happen this way I am not to be held as considering what follows, from Mr. Kirstein, as prophecy:

GILBERT SELDES

"We'd been up so late the night before, watching the fires and wandering around with the distant intermittent sound of a fusillade in our ears, that we slept quite late. I went downstairs to get the paper and see whether or not the milk had been delivered. Margot had bet me the paper would be there but the milk would not. The door step was empty of either. Margot, in the kitchen, suddenly called me. There was no gas in the range for eggs and coffee. We looked in the icebox and breakfasted on bread and orange juice. I thought I'd better telephone the office and explain my lateness, but I couldn't get Central. Margot said I'd better run along and she'd fix the place up.

The Taxi Sticks

"I walked over toward Lexington ave. to get the subway, and a lot of people, mostly men, were ahead of me running west. Fifty-first st. was barricaded at Third ave. Some federal troopers had commandeered an empty ground-floor of a loft building and machine guns were set on the show-window sills. The plate glass windows were shivered all over the pavement. The crowd was more or less orderly and one of the officers was joking with a truck driver. I even saw some taxicabs. I suddenly thought of Margot, and wondered if I ought to warn her to keep off the streets—but I decided I was late enough as it was and there wasn't much point in it anyway.

Tension in the Air

"At the subway entrance a federal guard was posted to keep people out. (It wasn't till the afternoon that the Nineteenth st. station was bombed, but they weren't taking chances.) I suddenly felt almost as a tooth that was about to ache, a vague if recurrent pang of uneasiness. The city was silent; silent but active, a subterranean activity of speed and tension which could result in anything. I had an almost overwhelming desire to speak to someone, for at least some temporary reassurance. But everybody was intent, preoccupied, walking with the walk of a man who is about to break into a run. The noise that filled the streets was the noise of silence after an explosion, only there had been no bomb.

Release

"All at once a considerable weight dropped from me. I had been impelled by circumstance to march obediently to my office, as yesterday, as the day before. But now, no use. I felt on vacation. There seemed no point in trying to get to the office. But, somehow, I couldn't stop walking. At the Grand Central a cordon of police, with hands on their holsters, stood at every entrance. There were no red caps. I noticed a number of people drive up to 42d st. entrance and emerge with heavy bags. One woman, her hair loose, stepped from a cab. She thrust a dollar into the driver's hand and tugged at a heavy valise. I could see she was in a hurry and ran over, offered to carry it. She said nothing but gave me a grateful wince and I followed her on the trot until we were stopped by the guards. It was before they issued passes. I could see that if they would make her open her bag for inspection she'd lose her train, which I assumed must still be running; why else her haste? Her face was such a picture of terror and I was so patently innocent that the police did pass us through. She ran ahead faster and faster.

No Information

"The weight of her bag made me stop to shift it to my other hand and when I looked up she was gone. The great hall of the station was not full. Every so often a single desperate figure would dash across the marble floor and disappear into an exit. I had the feeling that the people were merely running into the train sheds, that no trains awaited them in the tunnels. A little boy suddenly started screaming. I turned to try to find my lady and saw him, also alone, howling. There were no police in the room. There was no one at the information desk. I went over to the little boy and asked him his trouble. He was lost. He couldn't explain.

The End of It

"Helpless, I told him to watch my bag and I would go off and see what could be done. I sat him on the bag by the information desk and went off to telephone. A short, swarthy man in a black shirt suddenly stopped me and I felt a sickness of arrest. But he also was a left-over. He said merely 'Shine, please?' I had no idea of what I could do but I suddenly wanted to get a hold of Margot. I went to the telephone. I had no nickels—had only a quarter. It rang like a bell of bronze as it dropped. No answer. No answer at all. Outside in the street a siren screamed. And then, suddenly and with that slow acceleration and retarded swiftness of accident and reality, a boom like no noise, a sound like a dam bursting forestrated the proximity of my ear drums. The walls had not yet fallen and I started running toward the Great Hall again. Where the round information desk had been was a cloud of cyanic smoke . . . The woman's bag? . . . the little boy? . . . the boom?"

BEATEN WIVES WIN DIVORCES, MATES GONE

Mrs. Mary McCarron of Dorchester, between weeping spells, told Judge McCoole in Suffolk probate court today of four beatings she received at the hands of her husband, whom she was suing for divorce.

Mrs. McCarron said they married in March, 1917, and 10 years later they argued over money matters. He blacked both her eyes.

In 1928, she said, he beat her on three occasions. The first assault was in May, when he kicked her on the forehead. He objected to her visiting friends, she said.

The second beating was the result of her finding pictures and addresses of girls in his pockets, she testified. He again blacked her eyes, and left a permanent scar on her nose, and then beat her for going for a ride with a girl friend in September, she said.

She was granted a decree nisi by Judge McCoole.

Mrs. Mary L. Slater of Dorchester ave., Dorchester, testified her husband, Wayne, an actor, deserted her on their honeymoon in New Brunswick.

They were married in October, 1931, and in December, while in St. Johns, he left her and she has never seen him since.

An advertisement in a Boston newspaper, asking for an automobile mechanic, gave Mrs. Ida M. Patchell, of Dorchester, the clue to her husband's address, she told Judge McCoole.

Going to a Commonwealth ave. apartment, she said, she found her husband living with "Mrs. X."

He was out of a job and she had resorted to the advertisement in the hope of finding him.

Before he left, she said, he hit her on the chest during a bridge game, because she and her partner were winning. The "partner," Mrs. Jane P. Squire, corroborated her testimony. Mrs. Patchell was granted a decree.

Mrs. Lilliam J. Morgan, of Myrtle st., West End, told the court her husband, Albert, left her stranded in Binghampton, N. Y., and she almost starved before getting back to Boston.

Shortly after their marriage she said, he gave up his job, and she had to pay for the household furnishings out of her salary as a proofreader.

Then he took her to Binghampton, where he deserted her. She was granted a decree nisi.

Wild Boar Killed by Auto in Stoneham

Frederick Clivio of Essex st., Charlestown, hurrying through Stoneham thought for a moment that he was in "darkest Africa" when a wild boar jumped into the road ahead of him.

Frenchman at 102 Gives Credit to Wine

Paris, June 24—Paul Joyeux, age 102, claims to be the oldest Parisian and is undoubtedly one of the healthiest in the metropolis.

He gives the credit to good French wine which he has been drinking under two kings, a republic, an empire and still another republic.

JAIL-BREAKER IS RETURNED TO STATE PRISON

Ernest H. Abbott, jail breaker extraordinary, was returned to the State Prison today.

Escaping July 29, 1931, Abbott enjoyed an exciting career in various parts of the country. He was arrested in Oklahoma last week, in a round-up of suspicious characters, and fingerprints disclosed his identity.

Warden Hogsett questioned Abbott at length about his escape from jail at Pittsburgh a few months ago.

FLED PITTSBURGH JAIL

He was arrested on suspicion in that city, and sawed his way out while Massachusetts officers were speeding west to claim him. Today Pittsburgh asked Hogsett to question him as to the method of his escape, and find out if he bribed a jail official.

"I did not need to bribe," Abbott told Hogsett, before he was sent to his cell.

"I had a saw attached to my belt, and it was like breaking out of a house of cards. Those Pittsburgh cops take themselves too seriously."

OFFICER'S HOME ENTERED

When he escaped from Charlestown, Abbott was serving seven to 10 years for breaking into the home of a Somerville policeman. The policeman was on duty—at home.

Abbott will be tried again, for escaping jail, and felonious assault on John Hannon, a guard.

Hannon was stabbed when Abbott and two others go away. The others were recaptured.

U. S. Ends $42,000 Fight for 6 Cents

Providence, June 24 (AP)—A 10-year-old battle ended today when the government accepted six cents damages in lieu of $42,000 bond given Jan. 29, 1923, to guarantee 3600 cases of liquors aboard the British schooner Dorin would not be landed on American soil after the vessel was repaired. The government will withdraw from the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston an appeal from a decision by Judge Letts.

PLUNGE VICTIM A RESIDENT OF SOMERVILLE

The man who plunged three floors to his death, outside the testimonial banquet to Joseph A. Lanigone, Jr., in a Hanover st. hotel last night, was revealed today as John A. Lane, 44, of Wheatland st., Somerville.

Police said the victim of the plunge had no connection with the banquet, nor did police hold or question any of the guests.

With two other men, police said, Lane engaged a room on the second floor and later made his way to the third floor by mistake.

He was descending to the second when he tripped or lost his balance, plunged over the balustrade and landed on the marble floor of the main lobby.

Edward Santarpio of Orient ave., East Boston, told police he saw Lane fall and tried to break it without success.

NO GUEST QUESTIONED

Commenting on reports that city, state and county officials with the 800 diners were questioned, Capt. James R. Claflin of the West End station said none of the guests was queried.

"This affair had no connection with the Langone banquet and none of those at the banquet was questioned," Capt. Claflin said.

"Lane had a room on the second floor. He went to the third by mistake and fell as he was returning to the second."

Lane was unidentified through the night, but papers in his pocket led police to the home of Joseph Lane of Somerville ave., Somerville, a brother.

IN 8-STORY PLUNGE

Lane's death was the second of the night from high plunges.

A man, still unidentified, met death in a plunge from the eighth story of the Park sq. building.

The other victim was described as 35, 5 feet, 7 inches tall, weighing 160 pounds and of medium complexion.

He had dark hair, partly bald, blue eyes, and was dressed in threadbare blue suit, blue shirt and gray cap. Near the peak of the cap was the letter B and at the back the letters H. G.

A nickel and a key were the only articles found in his clothing.

V. F. W. TO ASK CASH BONUS AND REPEAL

Plymouth, June 24—Adoption of resolution calling on Congress to reconsider its adverse action relative to immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus and another seeking repeal of the 18th Amendment was assured at the 12th annual encampment of the Massachusetts Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which began business deliberations here today.

Three other important resolutions promise to stir spirited debate. One demands a congressional T. Hines, head of the veterans' administration at Washington. Another seeks removal of Gen. Frank T. Hines, head of the Veterans' administration, and the third seeks removal of Dr. J. F. Rooney as head of the Worcester office of the Boston Veterans' Bureau.

BATTLE DUE SATURDAY

The report of the resolutions committee followed reports of the department officers. Debate on the resolutions will not take place until Saturday. Business sessions are held in Memorial Hall. Commander George W. Cronin of Somerville is presiding. There are upward of 800 delegates present. There are 700 women of the auxiliary, which is holding its convention concurrently. Weather is ideal.

A banquet at Hotel Samoset last night, at which greetings were extended by the town officials and the local Chamber of Commerce, opened festivities, which will continue until Sunday. There is to be bloc dancing tonight. The parade will be held late tomorrow. Military balls will be held Saturday night at Memorial Hall and State Armory.

NAME OFFICERS SUNDAY

The election of officers will be held Sunday.

Two men are in the field to succeed Commander Cronin, Peter W. Pate, Boston attorney and senior commander, is opposed by George W. Farrell of West Springfield. Pate is reported to have the edge.

Mrs. Irene Forrest of Springfield, present senior vice-president, is said to be sure of election as president of the auxiliary.

WOMAN SOLON ENDS LIFE

Bristol, N. H., June 24—Arrangements are completed here today for the funeral of Mrs. E. Maude Ferguson, first woman ever elected to the state Senate, who committed suicide in an arbor in the rear of her home.

Plans call for state officials, a delegation from the Legislature and many notables to attend the last rites.

Medical Referee Dr. W. R. Garland of Plymouth was summoned to the house when her body was found late yesterday and issued a verdict of suicide. The gun with which she killed herself was found near the body.

Despondency over continued ill health is believed to have caused her act. She was recently compelled to forego a trip to Chicago, although she had been elected a delegate to the Republican convention.

Kip Rhinelander Wins $6000 Suit

Halifax, N. S., June 24 (AP)—Leonard Kip Rhinelander, who retreated to Nova Scotia in 1928 to escape the glare of publicity arising out of his unsuccessful divorce suit, today was awarded a judgment for $6000 against A. W. Mont of Halifax who collected insurance after Rhinelander's bungalow was destroyed by fire.

$2,264,000 Loan to Railroad Approved

Washington, June 24 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today approved a loan of $2,264,000 by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Western Pacific Railroad Co.

This is the third approved, the road having previously borrowed $2,102,000 to meet its fixed charges and to pay expenses.

Grasshoppers Hold Up Express Train

Winnipeg, Man., June 24 (AP)—Grasshoppers made a fast train act like a snail. Miles of rail west of the Deloraine, in Southwest Manitoba, were covered with the hoppers, inches deep. Lacking sand, the train crew had to go slowly for 20 miles.

VET INSURANCE UP TO HOOVER

Washington, June 24 (AP)—Awaiting President Hoover's approval at the White House is legislation to enable 97,000 World War veterans to renew their five-year government insurance contracts for an equal period without further medical examinations.

On such renewals, premium rates would be fixed according to the attained age, which the Veterans Bureau estimates will average 41 years in July, when most of these five-year policies expire.

Present law demands that on expiration, these policies be converted to higher-premium policies.

"The lowest issued policy to which the five-year term policy may be converted is the ordinary life policy," said the House veterans committee that prepared the legislation, explaining this form of contract would cost $171 annually on $6000 of insurance.

"There are approximately 97,000 veterans affected by this bill," the committee said, "and this is an extremely serious matter to them."

Couple Cancel $75,000 Owed Them in Country Store

Sioux, Ia., June 24 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. James Hennum have hearts of gold.

Ask any of the hundreds of persons who have dealings with them and they'll tell you all about it—of how the Hennums voluntarily cancelled all debts on the books of their general store—totalling about $75,000—and told them to forget their action.

But the beneficiaries aren't forgetting. They're telling the world about it. Many called to thank the Hennums. But if they expected much talk they were disappointed. Some came and offered to pay up, but in each instance the Hennums refused the money.

"My wife and I believe in forgiving and forgetting," Hennum said. "And this depression has been hitting some folks pretty hard."

The money, the Hennums suggested, could be turned over to churches or charity if their former debtors felt that way about it.

Old-Time Princeton Gridiron Star Dies

Princeton, N. J., June 24 (AP)—Pendleton Taylor Bryan, former president of the St. Louis Bar Association and old-time Princeton grid star, died today in Princeton Hospital of a throat infection.

Bryan had come to Princeton to celebrate with Dr. John Grier Hibben and other classmates the 50th anniversary of his graduation from Princeton.

BERGER'S FATE TO GO TO JURY LATE TODAY

"Take me to a hospital. Tell my mother Harry Wolen did the job."

On these two statements of Jack "Kid" Berger, his counsel argued innocence today in Suffolk ct. where Berger is on trial for second degree murder of Wolen and attempt to kill Arthur Vallucci last January.

"Berger was not involved in any shady business or he wouldn't have wanted to go to a hospital," argued Atty. Daniel J. Gallagher.

"On the other hand," Gallagher charged, "Wolen and Vallucci were running away when motorcycle officers chased their car. Later Wolen was slain—not by Berger.

"Their hands were red with Berger's blood. They weren't innocent when they were running away," he charged.

Berger defense has been a story that he discovered he was being taken for a ride and fought his way out of the machine after Wolen and Vallucci fired on him and he shot them.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle was to follow Gallagher, after which the charge of Judge Cox was due.

The case is expected to reach the jury late today.

N. E. BUDGETS CUT 12 MILLION

Fairlee, Vt., June 24—The 1932 total budgets of 119 New England cities and towns, representing nearly half of the district's population, have been reduced by $12,000,000 according to figures submitted to the New England Council, which began its quarterly meeting here today.

Eighty-five communities reduced their budgets, 31 increased them and three reported no change, the Council was told by John P. Pinsley of Worcester, chairman of the community development committee.

"The result is encouraging but not entirely satisfactory," Pinsley said. "The saving is no small accomplishment, but it is not sufficient."

New Hampshire has made the largest percentage reduction of any state in the list—per cent. Rhode Island budgets have increased 4 per cent. Those of the other New England states have been reduced as follows: Vermont, 5.6 per cent; Massachusetts, 5.4 per cent; Connecticut, 2.4 per cent, and Maine 1 per cent.

It was announced that the agricultural committee would call on the New England farm conference probably in October.

Auto Ring Head Is Jailed for 5 Years

Detroit, June 24—Clifford C. Ruhle, 36, Michigan's champion automobile thief, reached a detour sign when he came before Judge Edward J. Moinet on charges of conducting an auto theft ring that sent him five years in Leavenworth.

Ruhle, teamsters in court showed, had stolen cars in several states for him in Detroit and nearby Windsor, Ont., and Ohio points. He then sent cars to his home town, Coleman, Mich., where he sold them.

Beer Flood in Sewer System After Raid on Brewery

Lancaster, Penn., June 24—Two hundred thousand gallons of beer flooded the sewer system here today when police raided a brewery at Columbia.

The deputies took two hours to pour the beer into the sewers. Two hundred townsmen with mugs and pails gathered at the mouth of the sewer and drank the beer, after which they started drinking one another with it. Seven men were arrested in connection with the seizure.

SHRINERS CELEBRATE 50TH YEAR

THE CHIEF
Roy A. Faye, high potentate, of Aleppo Temple, reviewing parade on Boston Common, as part of that temple's 50th anniversary doings, yesterday.

ON GO THE FLAGS
Two thousand shriners marched to strains of music sent out by shrine bands. They paraded several of the Boston streets, Last night they celebrated. The color guard of the Aleppo Temple is shown above. (Staff photos.)

SHRINERS MARK ANNIVERSARY

The most colorful parade in Boston since the American Legion parade of 1930 was furnished by Shrine organizations celebrating the 50th anniversary of Aleppo Temple Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

Parading over a two-mile route to Boston Common yesterday, the Shriners put on one of the best shows ever. With their gaily-colored uniforms and excellent bands they attracted a crowd of 10,000 along the route and another group of 5000 on the Common.

The Shrine bands and drill teams led by the 200-piece band of the Aleppo Temple paraded in a squared space near the Charles st. mall and gave a demonstration of drill work which brought cheers from the crowds.

The anniversary ceremonies started with a business meeting. Potentate Roy A. Faye and a large reception committee welcomed guests from all over New England.

28 New Industries for Greater Boston

Establishment of 28 new industries in Greater Boston, Mass., the largest number to come to these shores since the Boston Chamber of Commerce began compilation of these reports early in 1909, is announced by the Chamber's Commercial and Industrial Bureau.

So far this year 102 new concerns have come to Metropolitan Boston, an increase of 21 over the figures of last year.

Town Votes $5000 for Highway Work

Salisbury, June 24—In an effort to cope with the unemployment conditions of the town, a special town meeting here voted an additional appropriation of $5000 for highway work.

Although an appropriation of $7000 was made at the town meeting in March for highway work, all but $2800 of it was used to pay for bills of last year, leaving only a small balance for any necessary repairs during the current year.

EX-TENNIS STAR IS SALESLADY

New York, June 24 (INS)—Mrs. Bunkhead Mallory, former tennis champion, was found in the sport shop of a Fifth Avenue department store selling tennis and golf clothes. Eight times women's national tennis champion, the wife of Franklin L. Mallory, broker, who is still recovering from an automobile accident of a year ago, summoned up her courage and turned from rackets to work proving she can take it.

The Valkyrie of the courts and boat Elizabeth Ryan Hall, Wightman and Suzanne Lenglen was remained amateur, she reminded visitors today.

"I played for the game—not for money. I have no money, my husband's business failed, he is not well—so I got this job."

CURLEY LAUDED FOR HUMANE AID SYSTEM

Through the efforts of Mayor Curley, needy families were kept together and not one resident of the city was without shelter last winter, William M. Taylor, chairman of the Emergency Committee on Unemployment, told members of that group today.

"The poor of Boston owe the Mayor of Boston a debt of gratitude," Taylor said at a meeting of committee members in City Hall where they had gathered to receive certificates of membership. "In striking contrast to other cities of the nation, children were permitted to remain with their parents because Mayor Curley and his welfare department provided the funds with which to obtain food, heat, light and shelter," he said.

The committee will remain in existence during the remainder of the time [illegible] about by unemployment.

Woman Remembers Neighbors in Will

Mrs. Mary Dermody of Stoughton left bequests of $100 each for nine trees to nine neighbors. Mrs. Mary Lanigan and Mrs. Katherine McDermott, to her will, owned yesterday in Probate Court. Mrs. Dermody's estate amounted to $1500 and the bulk of it was left to her brother, John F. Cutter.

Collapses From Hunger

New York, June 24—Harold Spellman, after fainting in the street, told police he had not eaten since Sunday and that he left a wife and seven children at their Manchester, N. H., home.

SIAM IN REVOLT; KING SEIZED AS AID IS SLAIN

Berlin June 24 (INS)—A report that a revolution has broken out in Siam, with King Prajadhipok and other members of the royal family under arrest was received in the Berlin newspaper Vossische Zeitung from Bangkok by the German flier Marga von Etzdorf today.

The foes said the army and navy had joined the revolt. The commander in chief of the military forces was shot and killed, the informant stated.

BEGAN RULE IN 1925

King Prajadhipok almost the last absolute monarch in the civilized world ascended the throne Nov. 26, 1925 on the death of his brother, King Rama VI.

Prajadhipok was educated in England and throughout his reign maintained friendly contact with the western world.

Accompanied by his wife and a large retinue, he visited the United States last year to undergo treatment for an eye ailment.

ESTABLISHED N. Y. COURT

He was attended the courtesy of the late Mrs. Whitelaw Reid a mansion Ogden Hall near White Plains, N. Y. Here he established his court, the first Oriental potentate to transfer the splendor of his reign to the United States. Being absolute monarch with the power of life and death on all important questions of state, he handled all affairs by himself, but with the advice of his cabinet in Bangkok.

While in the United States the King and Queen were feted lavishly by American society leaders and received at the White House.

THRONE SOUGHT BY EX-KAISER

London, June 24 (AP)—Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Germany has joined his father the former Kaiser at Zeidhorst Holland, the Daily Herald said today.

The former crown prince's visit, the first he has made to Holland in seven years, the paper said, is to attend a conference of former members of the German royal family and Monarchist politicians on the possibility of restoring the Hohenzollerns to the German throne.

The Herald said the former Kaiser held talks with German bankers and politicians began last week at Zandvoort and were interrupted by his decision to return to Doorn for the week-end.

Yesterday, it said, he returned under cover of darkness to the mansion of Baron von Heydt at Zandvoort and was joined by [illegible] who had arrived there after secret passage across Germany from East Prussia.

"With the arrival of the former crown prince," the Herald said, "the gathering was complete for hearing reports on the situation in Germany and developments in themonarchist movement. The private talks between bankers, politicians and secret emissaries continued until late last night."

PROOF ASKED IN WALKER CASE

New York, June 24 (AP)—James F. Finnegan, one of the seven citizens who filed charges with the governor asking the removal of Mayor Walker "for prodigious inefficiency and misfeasance," appealed today to Senator Samuel Hofstadter for records he believed to substantiate those charges.

Finnegan's appeal to the chairman of the legislative committee investigating the New York administration, was the result of an address at Harvard University yesterday by Samuel Seabury, the committee counsel, who said that the charges against Walker were for effect.

In Finnegan's request he quoted Seabury as saying millions of dollars have been wrung from the people of New York" and that the "ignorant, the poor and the helpless have been ruthlessly and remorselessly preyed upon."

Police Quell Riot in Home for Girls

Detroit, June 24 (AP)—Police reserves were summoned to the Juvenile Detention home today to quell a disorder in which 30 girls between 14 and 17 years old fought for more than 15 minutes in the dining room with table knives, dishes and other implements. Dresses were torn, pickets of hair was pulled and faces were scratched. Policemen also came out with scratches and bruises.

Diet Broken Up by Riot Over Uniforms

Stuttgart, Germany, June 24 (AP)—Communist, Centrist and Socialist members of the Wurttemberg Diet walked out of the chamber today when the National Socialists appeared in uniform. They returned and offered a bill to eject any uniformed member. This created a hubbub which necessitated temporary suspension.

Hyannis Man Wins $10,000 in Auto Suit

Canandaigua, N. Y., June 24 (AP)—A verdict of $25,000 for Mrs. Vida L. Hayes of Erie, Pa., and $10,000 for E. W. Cotton of Hyannis, Mass., in an auto accident suit, were returned in court here today. Mrs. Cotton was killed.

NAMES ON CAPE ANN THAT EXPLAIN THEIR ORIGIN AND THAT MYSTIFY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

PROF. ROGERS

NOTHING IS MORE fascinating than to trace the history of the human race in the names that man gives to natural objects and leaves after him. The history of those names and of their migration throws light on races and their intermingling as almost nothing else can; it throws light on historical events; it shows human fancy playing over the familiar everyday sights and finding names for them with spontaneous ease. The legend which tells of Adam's naming the animals is essentially right. As Mark Twain put it "Why, it just looks like an elephant!"

I have just been reading a thick novel, John Cooper Powys' "A Glastonbury Romance," which carries one in imagination back to the oldest peoples in England, the folk who lived before the Druids, the folk who dreamed the old Welsh Arthurian romances. Not a little of its imaginative glamour comes from the place names of Glastonbury and the Somerset lowlands; ancient Briton, Cymric or Welsh, Roman, Saxon, Norman. The pageant of history marches in those names.

Many Names Explain Origin

But even little local places with shorter histories can give rich food for thought. On the wall before me as I write is a large map issued by the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, showing the coast of Cape Ann from Manchester up around to Castle Island in Essex and the lower tip of Plum Island. A big generous map crowded with names and soundings and symbols of marine marks. They are names to set you questioning and wondering, most of them plain, homely names in the English tongue, but full of color and flavor.

Why "Glass Head?" I wonder. Gale Point is clear enough and so is Ram Island. Lobster Cove explains itself, though the lobsters may be few there today. Ballarach Cove bothers me; it sounds Australian, somehow. Great Egg Rock is common along our coast. Why call one rock in the midst of the salty sea Salt Rock? Did Boohoo Ledge receive its name from a tragedy or only from a farcical accident?

Kettle Cove is shaped like a kettle, of course. Did Neverfail Ledge never fail to catch a skipper napping and rip his keel off? Sounds reasonable. Old Spirit Rock has an uncanny ring to it, though it may be only the ring of bottle glass. White Beach, Black Beach and Gray Beach probably take their names from the color of the sand. But outside Kettle Cove there is a Kettle Island which stumps me, because it isn't shaped like a kettle. Nomenclature by attraction, perhaps. Poppiestone Ledge is a juicy and satisfactory name.

Norman's Woe, of course, was named by a historic shipwreck of Longfellow's saccharine yarn) away back in the 1630's. There are other "Woes" along the coast and the significance is always the same. Freshwater Cove means that there some thirsty mariner found a spring and gave thanks. Prairie Ledge seems out of place, somehow, on the eastern coast. Round Rock Shoal is clear enough. Did Dog Bar ever drown a dog at low tide? And who was Black Bess of Black Bess Rocks?

Mystery of Loblolly Cove

There is a Mayflower Ledge in Gloucester Harbor, though the Mayflower never anchored there. There's a Five Pound Island close to shore and a Ten Pound Island farther out. Do they still mark the prices paid for them, or has some sea-change happened to the old names? Curiously, the point that bears the ragged profile of Old Mother Ann, by the lighthouse, has no name on the map.

Round in front of Col. Prentiss' and Col. Andrews' estates is a Bemo Ledge which invites an antiquarian. The long rough coast of the Bass Rocks have no names until you come to little Salt Island and beyond it bigger Milk Island. Again, why Milk Island in the midst of the sea? Now we are coming to the part that Capt. John Smith knew and gave such outlandish names, reminiscences of his perhaps mythical battle with the Turkish Champion for the Sultan's Daughter. The Turk's Head still remains, though it is called Thatcher's Island now. But the name of the heathen princess has vanished except from legend.

Whale Cove is clear enough, but Loblolly Cove, although it is the loveliest and most musical name on the coast, is not so clear. A Loblolly may be a tree, either West Indian or southern; it may be a "loutish boy or fellow"; or it may be a surgeon's boy on shipboard, or a handy-man. Anyway, it's a noble epithet for a cove. Out beyond the abortive breakwater—lasting monument to governmental inertia—are the Dry Salvages and the Little Salvages (accent on the second syllable and a long A—meaning, of course, Savages. When wind and water are high they look savage even now, like Stevenson's Merry Men.

There's Hog Island, Too

Around the top of the cape the names are no less interesting. The whole bay, of course, is Sandy Bay, the original name for Rockport. There is Pigeon Cove, where the wild pigeons used to darken the sun, and Hoop Pole Cove (which leaves me high and dry) and Halibut Point and little Folly Cove (whose folly, I wonder?) and Lane's Cove, which used to be and should be still Flat-stone Cove, and Plum Cove, where the beach plums must once have grown, and round Annisquam, the only Indian name of the lot, by the way, to another Lobster Cove, where the little yachts lie at anchor. Not to forget Goose Cove!

Across the channel are the Barn Rocks and the Bald Rocks and Coffin Beach, now (by an historical reversal to the old Indian) Wingaersheek, and so up across the Essex River to Hog Island, where, I believe the Choate family came from. I have often wondered whether the Choates were originally Shoats. But that is probably blasphemy. And so up by Castle Neck to the tip end of Plum Island—and the map ends.

A few miles only as the coastline is measured, but how much unrecorded human history is condensed in those few miles, leaving only such poor traces as these humble and colloquial place names. If they all could be explained, you would have a social history of surpassing interest. You will remember at the end of Part II of Carlyle's "Past and Present," how he spoke of old Abbot Samson, whose name posterity remembers merely because one monk wrote a little book about him which happened to be preserved. Said Carlyle, he was only one of the thousands and generations of forgotten men whose labor fertilized the history of England. They died; their work did not.

So for a moment we catch a glimpse of the men who carelessly gave names to this coastline, settled upon it, fished the deep and tilled the land and left it to their sons, did nothing of historical importance but, somehow, stamped their character on the places to which they gave these quaint and familiar identifications.

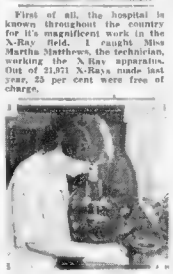
Inspecting Hospital With the Candid Camera

By CANDID CAMERA

The Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals, formerly known as the Homeopathic Hospital, located in East Concord st., Boston was the scene of my visit. I thought readers would like to know of the great work they do there.

First of all, the hospital is known throughout the country for it's magnificent work in the X-Ray field. I caught Miss Martha Matthews, the technician, working the X-Ray apparatus. Out of 21,971 X-Rays made last year, 25 per cent were free of charge.



Another specialty of this hospital is the analysis of chemicals and fluids. Miss Dorothy Hyde, a technician, is observing the reaction of certain chemicals in the display.

I took a stroll through the the children's ward. I met little Mary O'Connor, of Everett, a patient. An average of 30 patients daily are treated in this ward.

WE had quite a chat with the ambulance driver. He I. Vincent McElroy. He is responsible for saving many a life. (Staff Photos.)

FIRST IN CITY HISTORY TO WIN HONOR

Dorchester Accident Victim Gets Award as Thousands of Seniors Are Graduated

While thousands of Boston high school seniors received their diplomas amid pomp and ceremony today, Esther Perlmutter of 14 Sutton st., Dorchester, waited patiently at home, her crutches beside her.

For a whole year and more, she had studied at home, striving to keep up with her class at the Dorchester high school for girls.

And she had her reward, not in public with her school chums, but quietly in her home with her mother, Mrs. Herman Perlmutter.

REILLY CONFERS DIPLOMA.

When Chairman William A. Reilly of the Boston school committee drove up in his car and handed her a diploma, she became the first pupil in the history of the Boston public schools to receive a diploma for home study.

This honor crowned a lifetime of hardships for the Dorchester girl. First her left leg was lamed by infantile paralysis. Then the other was broken when two automobiles collided and one crossed the sidewalk and crushed her against an iron fence while she was on her way to school.

Through the kindness of her principal, Miss Alice Twiss, she was instructed at home by her teacher, Miss Anne Clancy.

Graduation exercises took place in Jamaica Plain, Dorchester, Hyde Park, Charlestown, Brighton and East Boston today, with Roxbury Memorial High School holding its graduation for girls in Symphony Hall. Other exercises take place tonight.

PERFECT STUDENT

The school authorities revealed today that Matilda J. Lekas, 14, of 14 Elmore st., a pupil at the Lewis Intermediate School, Roxbury, had an A in all her subjects for three years at that school, and has not been absent or tardy during her entire schooling to date.

Dorchester girls and boys received their diplomas at exercises at the school this morning, from Arthur L. Gould, assistant superintendent of schools, while seniors of the Dorchester High School for Girls had their exercises at the Codman theater.

Military diplomas were presented by Capt. Albert J. Kelley and academic diplomas by Committeeman Maurice J. Tobin at Jamaica Plain high school exercises at the Jamaica theater.

BRIGHTON HIGH EXERCISES

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Perry of the school board presented diplomas at both the Brighton high graduation and the Charlestown high exercises, both of which took place this forenoon but at different hour. [illegible] Schwab, president of Thayer Academy, was chief speaker at Brighton high.

Hyde Park exercises also took place this morning, with Dr. Mackey of the school committee handing out the diplomas.

Mr. Reilly officiated at the East Boston high graduation, where Vincenza Nicastro and Mary L. Hyland were valedictorian and salutatorian, respectively.

DOWNEY SPEAKER

At Mechanic Arts high exercises will be held at 7:45 p. m. Michael J. Downey, assistant superintendent of schools, will present the diplomas and Edwin F. Fitzpatrick, headmaster, will speak. A. Walter N. Ormsby '11, president of the Alumni Association.

The exercises of the High School of Practical Arts will be held at the school at 8 p. m. Mr. Downey will present the diplomas and John F. Reardon, assistant superintendent of schools, will speak.

At 8 p. m. the South Boston High school exercises will open at the school. Dr. Mackey, who lives in the district, will speak and present diplomas. Maj. Leo W. Banks will award military diplomas.

WHAT A BOY

William Hutchins, the 49-pound strong baby of Cambridge.

HE SPEEDS UP THE BABY CARRIAGE

"Little" William Hutchins, 20-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hutchins of Elm st., Cambridge, is thinking seriously of issuing a challenge to Jack Washburn, "the bad man" of wrestling. William weighs 49 pounds, and struts around with bulging muscles. He thinks nothing of taking his 3-year-old sister, Dorothy, for a stroll in the baby carriage. Wrestling is tame says William. He wrestles with children twice his age. (Staff photo.)

NEW DRIVE ON ALIEN SMUGGLING RING TO OPEN IN BOSTON

2 RESCUED BY LINER BOSTON REACH PORT

Snatched From Sea as Racing Sloop Breaks Up at the Height of Storm

Snatched from death at sea when their racing sloop was broken up in last night a storm, two New York yachtsmen, one of them injured, arrived at India wharf today aboard the Eastern Steamship liner Boston

The two, William J O'Brien 31 of Mount Vernon, and Fred Lowenheim 33 of New Rochelle were rescued by the crew of the Boston after their sinking craft was sighted in Long Island Sound

O'Brien suffered injuries to his leg during the collision of the sloop Both were near exhaustion when the searchlight of the Boston picked up the outline of the stricken sloop

The two men were returning the sloop to Rye, N Y., from where they had started Wednesday in the American Yacht Club handicap to New London Ct

J. S. Prince of New Rochelle, owner of the craft had taken part in the race but left the sloop at New London

Two "lost" boys, hunted all night, were found asleep in a hammock at the home of one boy's grandmother. She washed their faces and sent them home—but they didn't go. They're lost again. They are Francis McCarthy, 9, and Leo Anthony, 12, both of Saratoga st., East Boston.

N. E. CENTER OF PLOT TO BRING IN CHINESE

Employes of Small Ship Lines Blamed; $1000 Is Paid Per Head for Oriental Running

U. S. officials here are about to open a new and intensive drive against the smuggling of aliens.

Anna C M. Tillinghast, commissioner of immigration, is prepared to co-operate with Asst. U. S. Atty John W Schenck who admits New Eng and is a center of the industry.

Chinese are smuggled in for $900 to $1000 Mr Schenck declared today, while certain Europeans and those from the Near East are smuggled in at rates ranging from $700 to $800.

Mr Schenck says Boston and Providence are key cities and the smugglers are well known. The problem is to get evidence.

"We have asked responsible steamship companies to help us," Mr. Schenck explained.

"Unfortunately, the employes of some steamship companies are our worst enemies.

EMPLOYES BRIBED

"When a master smuggler decides to bring in a load of Chinese or Armenians, he finds it easy to bribe stewards, deck hands and whatnot into caring for the human cargo. Frequently the shipmasters don't know they are transporting people whose names are not on the purser's books.

"I think that in this time of depression we have the support of every American in our war on smuggling of aliens Some of them are criminals Many are willing to evil Most of them hope to get jobs Americans could use I know of aliens getting $15 a week from American communities as welfare relief who never did a day's work in this country."

Mr. Tillinghast said that there were now more than 2,000 aliens here such as obtaining fictitious birth certificates, passports and the like.

80 ARE INDICTED

"There are over 80 persons under indictment in Massachusetts for activities connected with getting aliens in," she said. "I believe there will be more indictments.

"Incident foreigners have made a mockery of our laws safeguarding the country. There are even schools for naturalization, conducted by racketeers, although Massachusetts conducts a bona fide school for those desiring to become citizens."

WRIGHT'S POND IS CLOSED

Because of wholesale complaint of vandalism, Wright's pond at Medford, the city's municipal bathing pond, has been ordered closed to bathing by the water and sewer commission.

Extensive real estate development has been under way near the pond and residents of the new sections have united in protest against conditions which exist, charging that while the beach officially closed at 8 o'clock bathing parties had come to the beach long after dark and that nude bathing by both sexes was common. Most of the pond is surrounded by dense woodlands.

After hearing complaints Mayor Burke got in touch with members of the water commission and suggested that the place be closed to bathing until plans could be carried out to correct conditions.

First of Carillon Concerts Wednesday

Nap Leads to Cell

Edris Roberts, Wellesley textile engineer, who was found sleeping in the nude by police on the second floor of an electrical heating company plant at 1217 Washington st. A check for $150 was found in his trou- ers.

Pianist Would Pound Keys in Prison for Bed and Board

A middle-aged man with bushy hair and a briefcase filled with sheet music called on Warden Hogsett at the State prison today, looking for a job.

"The paper said you needed a pianist and that there wasn't one among your 906 prisoners. I could do with three meals a day and lodging, and I'm a good pianist if I do say so myself."

When the warden explained he must have a prisoner for the job, the applicant suggested he might do an O. Henry and throw a brick through a window.

"Better not," advised the warden, "because you would probably end up on Deer Island."

So the pianist, pulling down his hat, departed pianissimo.

POLICE SEIZE A NUDE SLEEPER

Naked as the day he was born, a serious-minded textile engineer was found sound asleep today on the second floor of the Acme Electrical Heating Co. plant at 1217 Washington st.

E. Dedham street police took him in, but were at a loss for a charge to place against him

He was not intoxicated.

He was booked as Edris Roberts, 35, of 2 Durant rd., Wellesley. The attendant who found him looked for an hour before locating his clothes.

In his pants the attendant discovered a small amount of cash and a check for $150.

The window of the basement was smashed, but Roberts swore he didn't know anything about that. Apparently the time had come when he wanted to lie down.

FR. McNAMARA SERVICES

Joins Planning Board

Edward H. Hoyt today resigned from the City Planning Board and Mayor Curley appointed William Stanley Parker of 148 Mt. Vernon st., Back Bay, a former member of the board, to fill the vacancy.

HOLMES BACKS FRANKFURTER

A second endorsement of Prof Felix Frankfurter of Harvard law school for the Massachusetts supreme bench to which Gov. Ely nominated him on Wednesday, has been given by Oliver Wendell Holmes, former justice of the U. S Supreme Court

"I think the appointment is admirable," said the retired jurist last night. "I think it a great mistake to attempt to affect the question by the attitude of the candidate on a particular case. It is obvious that different views may be taken on that matter, and the issue before the governor and his council is one of general competence for the place.

"As to that, there can be no question. In the matter of learning, understanding of affairs and passion for justice, Prof. Frankfurter is much more than ordinarily qualified."

THUGS BLOCKED IN HOLDUP

Two holdup men were fought off by Frank Manganelli, 34, proprietor of the fruit store on Beacon st., Somerville, last night, when they made an unsuccessful attempt to rob him

When they entered, Manganelli became suspicious and demanded to know what they wanted. One of the pair struck him in the jaw When Manganelli tackled the man the other robber pounced upon him and gave him another blow on the head. At this point the proprietor began a scream for help

His cries frightened the robbers who fled. In their way out of the store one of them spitefully kicked his foot through a showcase window and then pushed a news-stand across the threshold to block the proprietor from pursuing them Manganelli was treated at Central Hospital

APPARENTLY 1932 IS GOING INTO THE RECORD books as a good year for debutantes . . . many of our best families are presenting their most beautiful blossoms on the tree of life for your approval . . .

LYDIA FULLER

Mr. and Mrs. John Wells Farley are sending another bud forth into the social world. Miss Elizabeth, and "Mike" Farley's daughter is sure of a royal welcome. Her father, "Mike," as he has always been called, was one of Johnny Harvard's most popular men, and is still an exceedingly attractive one. Her mother, who comes from the North . . . Canada, we believe . . . is also a very delightful person, and her two pretty daughters, Louise and Betty, resemble her.

Sister Louise came out last season but did not get into the social swim as often as many . . . she and Elizabeth are rather quiet types and do not care for society with the Big S. However, they are sure of a good time waiting for them if they wish to accept it.

Everyone is looking forward to Lydia Fuller's ball . . . what a wonder house is 150 Beacon st.! It is the former residence of Governor Draper, and where the Tom Gannets once entertained . . . grand parties have taken place under that roof in the good old days and no doubt our beloved former Governor Alvan T. Fuller will plan that his first daughter to enter the social world will have everything that money can buy.

Lydia is very attractive, small, delicate and chic . . . and also has a great deal of talent in several directions. She is sure to be very popular, and her charming mother will see that her course will run smooth . . . a clever mother is a great asset to a budding debutante.

Eleanor Hallowell to Make Bow

ANOTHER RAVISHING BEAUTY WHO WILL BE A great success socially is Eleanor Hallowell, only daughter of Mrs. John W. Hallowell (Marian Ladd). Her eyes are large and dreamy, brown in color, and she has the good looks of both sides of her family, the Ladds and the Hallowells. Her father was the late John W. Hallowell.

Soft, light brown, naturally wavy hair frames her beautiful features . . . she is tall and slender . . . keep your eyes open for her at her cousin Nancy's wedding, which takes place down on the Cape on the 28th.

She is cousin to Nancy Ladd and to Mable Thayer, who married Richard Storey, another very beautiful member of the family. Eleanor is certain to have a Big Time this season . . . or we are going to give up prophesying.

On Top of Ladder

THIS YEAR WILL SEE SOME really outstanding debuts in the receiving line . . . Katherine Gardiner is another who is on the top of the ladder and will not fall off . . . she is brunette with classic chin, rather exquisite bone structure, large, brown eyes looking frankly out into the world, curious and snappy, a rare combination.

THE G. PEABODY GARDNER JR. place in Brookline is a show place. Reginald Peabody Gardner, the former Rose Peabody, comes from one of the best families of Bridgeport and Kitty, as she is called, reminds one of her beautiful mother.

Studied Abroad

KATHERINE HAS BEEN away at boarding school and this year has been studying abroad. She is granddaughter of the "Jack Gardner" Isabel Gardners which makes Mrs. George H. Monks her aunt and the picturesque Olga her cousin.

THERE WILL BE MUCH ENTERTAINMENT for Kitty this winter.

MARGARET "PEGGY" JACKSON, graduate of Miss Winsor's school, has many friends in New York, Boston, Maine and Maryland, where her husband was born. Her husband is now with the Chilton Club and no doubt Peggy will make her home from that same delightful place.

BLACK GOWNS COME BACK

Formal Wear Standbys Going Strong

By DOROTHY ROE

New York, June 24 (U.S.)—When it rains white for evening these summer nights it's black.

The old standbys for formal wear still are going strong and black evening gowns are among the newest shown by some of our better shops just now.

Earlier in the season, everything was white and pastel.

But now, though white still leads the parade, black has staged a comeback.

Witness a couple of models shown this week as the last whisper of the mode.

There's one of a soft black taffeta, trim and tailored, with a wide belt and buckle of self-material—and even pockets on either side of the skirt.

It is worn with a cape of white sheer-bar organdie, tying in a bow at the front and falling to the elbows, trimmed with wide bands of the organdie.

It is all kind of startling, crisp and new.

And you're bound to look strictly 1932 if you appear in it.

Another black evening dress attracting much attention is of black lace, with a simple silhouette and a raised waistline. It, too has a tailored belt, and its decolletage is outlined by a bit of self-ruching that is both unusual and effective.

With this you may wear one of the very brief new jackets of white velvet, which are mostly sleeves, crossing in surplice fashion across the front, barely below the breast. The sleeves are huge balloon affairs, gathered into a tight cuff.

WOMAN'S HAPPINESS AFTER 50 :-: MISS FAIRFAX

At First Many Feel the World Has Crumbled and Life Is Not Worth Living

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"WHAT IS LEFT to a woman after 50?" A wife and mother asks this question. She feels that her world has crumbled. Her children have interests of their own. Two are married; two are launched on successful careers. Her husband no longer is attentive.

Life has taken away her job, and the cruelty and injustice of this appals her.

But life is cruel to anyone who is content to sit with folded hands and accept. Life is a battle ground, where quitters go to the wall. If this woman can only be made to realize it, the life which is dawning for her is a pretty satisfactory sort of life. If she does not demand all the thrills, emotions and false stones that made up life at 20

SOME COMPENSATIONS

Some of the compensations of being 50 are that we're glad to forego some of the thrills and twitters of early youth; that the spotlight doesn't seem essential; most important of all, that we've learned to "laugh it off," so that disappointments seem less like earthquakes; that we can even look at the one time boy friend and be so thankful we didn't marry him that we could almost fall in love with him a second time from pure gratitude.

Fortunately, this lady who writes me of the horrors of being 50 has what she calls a modest sufficiency on which to live. The well-earned leisure to which she is entitled after bringing up a family of four can therefore be brightened by some of the agreeable things of life. Travel and amusement will not be beyond her reach. Plays, movies and concerts may be enjoyed without having to squeeze pennies too hard, and that tremendous asset in a woman of any age—pretty clothes and the ability to be well groomed—will not be wholly denied her.

SOURCE OF HAPPINESS

Unless she is that pitiful type of middle-aged woman that makes you think of an old doll, this lady will not entirely forego either the satisfaction of things of the spirit. The traditional cup of cold water given to those less fortunate is a real source of happiness. Even the beauty specialists grant that nothing takes away age so, petulant lines like the good old-fashioned "kind act."

Not long ago, a woman whose peace of mind had been wrecked by the poverty and distress she saw on every side made up her mind to do something neighborly every day she had no money to give. Her contribution was to go to an East Side tenement in New York, gather up half a dozen children from their tired overworked mothers, give them a bath and take them to the park to play. That kindly work should have proved a good many wrinkles out of that lady's face!

He Doesn't Approve of Petting

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am just 18 and go with a young man of the same age. He doesn't approve of "petting parties" and tells me so. I, as a matter of fact, but he also dislikes to see a girl smoke, and there I disagree with him. He is always telling me to quit smoking. I love him very much. Must I stop smoking?

If I do

Dear P. C.: How much can you save? Are you one of the world's quitters who must have a cigarette in her mouth all the time? If you are, I think the young man has your best interests at heart if he suggests that you stop smoking. But if you're a fairly passive smoker who indulges only moderately, there's a possibility with you and it's possible you may bring him around in time.

The Marry-Go-Round; 'Fads'

By HELEN ROWLAND

"NO ACTINIC RAYS for me!" exclaimed Mrs. Green as she pulled her becoming shade hat down a little farther over her eyes and led Mrs. Divot to the shady spot under the gay awning. "I've never fallen for the sun tan craze and I'm not courting a peeling nose."

* * *

"One half-day lying in the sun and I can acquire a tan. But ordinarily, if I manage the makeup properly, I can pass for a demi-blonde," agreed Mrs. Divot, powdering her nose.

* * *

"Leaping from craze to craze is our national characteristic," declared Mrs. Green. "Well snatch desperately at anything that promises slenderness. And the more it makes us suffer the more faith we have in it."

* * *

"Any woman who has spent a whole summer rubbing soothing ointments on her husband's shoulders and harkening to his proud boasts of how it hurts, will agree that man's favorite sport is 'suffering'—and then feeling sorry for himself," laughed Mrs. Divot.

* * *

And HOW! agreed Mrs. Green. We've seen our husbands sunburned beyond recognition, peeling and trying to get their dark brown pelts tanned down to the office. We've listened to their manly songs as they suddenly became the most amazing shade of the rose and shower on winter mornings.

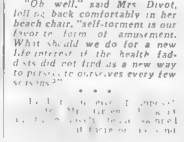
* * *

"We've suffered from the actinic rays, too, in the beach and tennis courts and golf links, but we've always managed to get home before we turned lobster red. We've suffered much and calves, liver and lettuce down our throats, but we've still managed to remain cooool. And most of us have had most of our perfectly good teeth pulled out in the name of fashionable arches."

* * *

"Oh, well," said Mrs. Divot, lolling back comfortably in her beach chair, "self-torment is our favorite form of amusement. What should we do for a new life interest if the health fads did not lure us a new way to persecute ourselves every few seasons?"

* * *



* * *

"Amen!" sighed Mrs. Divot. "And so would WE!"

Correct Manners

Acknowledging the Wedding Gift

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. As I am to marry a widower soon I wish you would give me some proper and sweet way to introduce my husband's grown daughter (single) to my friends and relatives.

2. How soon after a wedding gift is received should it be acknowledged?

F.

1. I hope that it won't be very long before this young lady will be highly delighted to be introduced by you as your "daughter" quickly hurdling that disagreeable word "step." But if you feel that it will only after your marriage would be too soon for this . . although you might talk it over with her and see what her reaction to this is . . . then you may refer to her in an introduction as "Mr. Wood's daughter" or just as "Miss Wood" or as "Miss Wood." In either case you would probably address her as "Florence." And Mary, that is Florence, would be a gracious and natural way to do that.

2. Every wedding gift should be acknowledged by a note just as soon as the bride-to-be can possibly write it. Best of all and most courteous of all is when the prospective bride writes each day notes for the presents received that day.

"ALL-BRAN LIVES UP TO REPUTATION"

Her Constipation Overcome by This Delicious Cereal

If you are troubled with constipation, read Miss Bundy's enthusiastic letter:

"I would like to congratulate the one who discovered ALL-BRAN. It really does live up to its reputation when it is said to 'relieve constipation.'

"I used to feel poor all the time—just down and out—and after reading an advertisement in a magazine about ALL-BRAN I got a box. It has evermore helped me, and it is not hard at all to eat."—Miss Mary Bundy, Bennetsville, S. C.

Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN brings two things needed to correct common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears the intestines of wastes.

How much safer than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Dainty Food For These Hot Days

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

THERE IS NOTHING so refreshing on a hot summer's day as dainty food. We all know that—and eat accordingly.

But there are ways you can save yourself work and worry and still prepare an appetizing meal. Naturally one of the quickest, easiest ways is to make use of ready-prepared ingredients.

STRAWBERRY ICEBOX PUDDING

1 pt. strawberries
1 cup powdered sugar
35 saltines
1 cup heavy cream
1 tsp. vanilla
10 marshmallows, cut small.

Wash and hull berries and reserve 6 or 8 for garnishing. Chop the remainder of the berries and add the sugar. Let stand 10 minutes. Crumble crackers fine. Beat cream stiff and add vanilla and cut marshmallows. Mix prepared fruit and crackers and fold into cream mixture. Turn into pudding dish and let stand 4-6 hours in refrigerator. Garnish with remaining berries, and serve plain or with added whipped cream. Six portions. Preparation, 8 minutes.

And here's a hearty English specialty: Are your scissors ready?

JELLIED MEAT LOAF

1 tbsp. gelatine.
½ cup cold water.
1 cup stock, well seasoned.
1 tbsp. minced onion.
10 saltines, crumbled fine.
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce.
2 tbsps. lemon juice.
¾ cup chopped cooked meat (veal, lamb, ham, beef or chicken).

Soak gelatine in cold water five minutes. Add stock and onion and bring to boiling point and pour over soaked gelatine. Stir in crumbled crackers, Worcester shire sauce and lemon juice and add meat. Turn into mould and chill. Remove from mould and cut in slices for serving. Garnish chicken loaf with chilled peas in lettuce cups; veal loaf with potato salad in lettuce cups, lamb loaf with mint jelly on butter wafers; ham loaf with potato chips and mustard pickle in tiny lettuce cups; beef loaf with pimiento strips and sliced dill pickle. Six portions. Preparation, 10 minutes.

Daily True Story

Saved by the Law

THE AVERAGE LAYMAN shares a profound contempt for legal technicalities.

It is only when a man falls into the toils of the law like Jerry Mulford, with the shadow of the electric chair crossing his path, that he realizes how intelligent are our lawmakers who create all these obstacles which justice must clear before it can impale its victims.

The evening Kenneth Banton was found on the third floor of the old brownstone house on Madison ave., bleeding to death from a bullet wound in the abdomen, Jerry had been out dancing along the East River.

Kenneth and Jerry had been neighbors in the converted rooming house for several years—but their paths had crossed only on one point. Both had fallen in love with blithe Margie Cochran, another roomer in the house.

So it was when Kenneth was found in a pool of his life blood near the threshold of Margie's door suspicion fell easily upon Jerry. And the suspicion gained credence by positive statements of the victim.

Kenneth died a few days later and the case was rushed before the grand jury for an indictment. Margie was the first to be questioned.

"Well, I heard a moaning outside and I opened the door and there was Kenneth stretched out before me. I rushed to him and lifted his head."

"Did he say anything?"

"He said that Jerry did it."

A second witness was called. Another roomer in the house.

"Tell us what you know of the case."

"I heard Miss Cochran screaming: 'Mr. Banton is shot. He's dying. Hurry, call a doctor. Call the police.' So I rushed out of my room and I saw her holding Mr. Banton's head in her hands. I lifted him and took him into her room and placed him on the bed while Miss Cochran ran to telephone."

"Did you hear the deceased say anything?"

"I asked him who did it and he replied in a low voice: 'Mulford got me.'"

The jury returned an indictment of murder in the first degree.

The case looked black indeed for Jerry Mulford. Was there a jury that would believe his story that he was strolling alone along the East River?

Well, Jerry Mulford got out—but only because he had engaged an intelligent lawyer who knew the technicalities of the law.

The attorney called for an inspection of the grand jury minutes, and after studying the testimony he appealed to the court.

"Your Honor," pleaded the lawyer, "the testimony presented by the witnesses is all hearsay, inadmissible as evidence in a court of law. There was no eyewitness to the shooting. As to the accusations made by the victim in the hospital, the law provides they are admissible only when they are made as dying statements or in contemplation of death.

"Your Honor," continued the lawyer, "I submit that nowhere in the records of the grand jury is it shown that the victim knew he was dying. Perhaps if he had known he was ready to face his Maker he might have wavered in his identification of the accused. I submit that the evidence presented before the grand jury was illegal and improper."

The court considered the argument—only a technicality as to the provisions of the law—but still it was the law.

The indictment was dismissed and Jerry Mulford walked out a free man, without benefit even of a trial.

All names of characters in this story are fictitious.

Migraine Real Disease, and Stubborn

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

"MIGRAINE headache" is a distinct type of headache which seems to run in families. It is most distressing and causes much suffering.

Dr Copeland

This form of headache should not be confused with the common everyday headache which is not a disease but a symptom of some disturbance in the body, such as stomach trouble, high blood pressure, kidney disease, certain organic defective eyesight, nose and throat trouble, or faulty posture in walking, standing and other common everyday activities.

Migraine is rarely caused by any of these disturbances. It is a persistent headache in which the attacks occur at periodic intervals on the same day every week, every two weeks, or about once a month. Usually the sufferer can gauge the time for attacks with surprising accuracy. The attacks may be brought on also by powerful emotional disturbances of any type, environmental or physical fatigue or marked digestive disturbances. Since it may be traced to the influence of hereditary and constitutional factors, the parents of migraine children should make every effort to keep the nerves of these children as stable as possible. These children are usually highly sensitive, intelligent and nervous. They should be given special care and kept simple and relaxed, and outdoor play in the sunshine should be encouraged.

The diet for children of this type should be simple and whole some free from salts, peppers, spices, condiments and fried or greasy foods. Drinking plenty of water should be encouraged, and if constipation is present, every effort should be made to correct it. Daily elimination is imperative.

At mealtime disturbances and aggravation must be avoided. It is best not to eat if one is upset. Food should be taken at regular hours and chewed slowly and carefully. The evening meal should be the lightest of the day and eaten early. Alcohol, tea, coffee and other stimulating beverages should be omitted from the diet. Avoid the use of laxatives. Encourage a natural elimination, and if necessary, resort to an enema.

Tom Goes to Dwight's Party

What Has Gone Before

Lynn Harding, young and pretty, is ambitious for a career in the Seacoast Bank and Trust Company. She loves Tom Shepard, secretary to one of the vice presidents but will not marry him, feeling they both must make their careers first. Then Lynn meets David Dwight, a prominent lawyer, through Sarah Dennet, her chief at the bank. Dwight is attracted to Lynn and invites her and Sarah to his apartment for dinner. Lynn's room-mate, Jenny La Grande, a model, warns her that Dwight is dangerous. Dwight asks Lynn to lunch just as Tom appears.

Now Read On—

"WITHOUT the what?" Lynn asked Dwight.

"Sarah," he said, smiling, "and besides, that was a cock-eyed allusion."

He set the date; and later, paying the check, murmured: "You'll telephone me if the evening's all right?"

"Of course it will be" she told him happily.

Leaving, she looked back at Mara Burt and her companion, so engrossed in each other. She had met Mara in the rest room, with Jennie. Jennie had given her Mara's history with characteristic brevity:

"Married, see, and Bill's out of a job. So she has to hold hers. She generally holds it by her knees."

A FAIR TYPIST

"Do you mean on her knees?"

"No, bo 'em. As far as I can make out she's only a fair typist and won't get much further. But the men like her. See?"

Lynn had been to Mara's apartment once or twice and had met Bill, a lucky young man, terribly aware that it was Mara's earnings and not his own which were paying rent and grocery bill. Lynn had come away feeling sorry for them both.

That evening while they were dressing to go out she spoke to Jennie of her encounter with Mara.

"Sure. Was it a tall guy, sort of tubercular-looking?" And at Lynn's nod, she went on: "That's her boss-nephew, Frank Hodgkinton. She told me about him. He's been out in Arizona with his wife and kiddy, and now he's back, working for his uncle. Mara says his wife doesn't understand him." Jennie laughed. "That's what they all say. He's been giving her a rush. His wife's gone, something, and sticks around home—they live in Flushing—and looks after the kids."

CRAZY A TRAINED SEAL

"She must be crazy," said Lynn. "Who, the wife? Oh, you mean Mara. Crazy like a trained seal. She knows darned well she would not get anywhere in business without the old S. A., and she doesn't give a whoop how she holds her job, as long as she holds it. I don't mean she'd go very far. She hasn't the courage," Jennie explained scornfully. "Bill's a scrapper, of course, but I don't blame him. It isn't so keen for him hanging around the apartment waiting for her to come home with the weekly wage."

But all men who marry girls who keep on working don't take that attitude, Lynn thought. Yet she wondered and after a moment, fluffing powder on her nose, inquired: "But suppose she really likes this Houghton?"

"Not she. She likes his pull, that's all. Besides, what's it to us if she fails by the wayside?" inquired Jennie inelegantly.

Nothing, Lynn supposed. But she liked Mara Burt and wished that she could be warned. For it was a rotten game she was playing, Jennie would laugh at that. Sarah, if consulted, would remark merely, "Apparently the girl has no ambition, no inte ligence, she is just ten mechanical fingers and for the most conscious sex appeal." Tom, who had met Mara and her husband, would shrug.

She thought I wonder what David Dwight would say. Some day she'd ask him what he thought, as a purely hypothetical case.

JENNIE ENCHANTED

Jennie was talking about Dwight's party. She was enchanted. She planned to put some money in a little number. "You know Lynn the one I tried you about, alternate white and black ruffles, simple, swell, stunning. Hope he's asked a lot of old men with stacks of money, who have reached the stage where they're satisfied to hold your hand."

"What a terrible prospect!

"You're young yet," said Jennie. The party that evening with Tom, was a Dutch-treat affair at an unfashionable speakeasy. Slim was there, and some of the U. B. C. men. Slim took Jennie; there were other girls. A nice, happy-go-lucky crowd, talking shop between drinks, cars and dances.

Tom was happy. "See, you look sweet," he told Lynn. "Like strawberry ice cream. I could eat you up!"

She wore the dusky pink dress Stry-cheyne ice cream and a rose quartz pagoda. She thought wistfully that it was a pity a person as young and dear, as thrilling and obvious as Tom could not shape a voice into quaint conceits and phrases as could say a man like David Wright.

Gabriel Lott she wanted to tell Tom of Dwight's proposed party until this party was halfway through and Tom's hair ruffled and his eyes bright, had just sung with several others the bulldog song.

HUMOR WAS EXPENSIVE

Lynn had thought he would rebel at the idea. But now when humor was expensive now was the time to tell him.

She did so. He replied crisply, "Swell, soup and fish, I suppose? Well, with a sponge and press, I can get by."

So, after all, he wouldn't mind going, Lynn was amazed to find herself slightly disappointed. Or was it that in this humor he didn't mind?

But next day he didn't mind, either. Stopping at her desk: "Nice of the old boy to ask me," he said carelessly. "Think how it will impress Gimbel."

He didn't mind because he'd be there with her.

Resplendently, he arrived at the girls' apartment in time to escort Jennie and Lynn in Dwight's car with the party. He leaned back against the upholstery. "This is the life," he said, and added gloomily, "Only, when you get it you're too old to enjoy it."

Lynn said laughing: "David Dwight isn't too old; he isn't old at all. You have such comic ideas about age, Tom. Anybody over 30 looks like Methuselah to you."

UNHAPPY SILENCE

Tom digested this in an unhappy silence. She didn't think Dwight old then. Well, he wasn't of course. But he was too old for Lynn.

Jennie wore red her black and white frock—one Lynn had loaned her—a la Lynn, and red shoes and earrings. She said, "We're in for a large evening, I think."

Lynn was white. Jennie had grunted, observing her, as dressed and ready, she swung away from the mirror, "You need something startling. If you tied a blue sash around you now, you'd look like first prize at a baby party. Give me your jewel box."

"I haven't any jewels. Just the old stuff grandmother left me."

"That's just what I want. How about the garnets? Knock 'em dead. That's what you need; you'll look virginal, quaint and sophisticated all at once. Here they are. Try 'em on."

GARNET NECKLACE

A garnet necklace set in intricate gold. Earrings, heavily encrusted, and two wide bracelets. "There," said Jennie, standing back, "that's what you needed. You looked like orange juice, straight, before. Grand's garnets put the kick into it." She handed Lynn a bright lipstick. "Tone up the little old mouth to match the antiques in color and you'll lay 'em in the aisles like a row of prewar stringers."

"Gee," said Tom, staring, upon his entrance, "you look swell, Lynn." He added courteously, "And you, too, Jennie."

Never mind me," said Jennie complacently. "I know how I look."

Haven't you got a bit of lipstick on?" was Tom's next, and natural, remark, his eyes on Lynn's brilliant mouth.

Lynn said, worried, "Perhaps. More than usual, anyway, but with this white dress—" She started for the bedroom, but Jennie caught her arm.

"Leave the face as is," she ordered. "Remember, Tom isn't married to you yet. You're just right as you are."

So Lynn and all I'm not to the party.

Wilkins opened the door, with a special smile for Lynn. The big room was filled with people. The loveliest frocks; the prettiest girls. "I feel like a poor relation," Lynn whispered to Jennie as they mounted the steps to the dressing room. Tom Dassing disappeared in Wilkins' wake.

MORE WOMEN

The room contained more women. Smoke laughter, powder clouds, heavy perfume, the smell of cosmetics.

When they had descended the stairs, Dwight detached himself from a group around the fireplace and came forward to meet them. He took Jennie's hand in his and measured her with a cool amused glance when Lynn murmured the introduction.

"Delightful of you to come, Miss La Grande," he said formalmals, but his eyes danced.

"Jennie to you," was Jennie's generous response.

"Of course Jennie to me." He turned to Lynn, and now his eyes were not smiling nor were they cool. "Where's the lucky young man?" he wanted to know.

"There he is. Tom, oh, Tom!" called Lynn, turning to see Tom standing by the door, very tall, very broad, very young, ill at ease, with the sulky expression of the small boy who finds the parts not quite up to his expectations.

Tom came over quickly. Women turned to watch him walk across the floor, not with his boyish friendly tread, but with the light step of perfect balance and vitality. He and Dwight shook hands and murmured conventionalities.

Tom said, with an engaging grin and the courtesy of the junior which an infuriated the other man, "Looks like a grand party, sir."

"It will be, now," said Dwight, smiling, his right hand lightly on Lynn's arm. "Let's circulate, shall we?"

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Broadway Merry-Go-Round!

Step back, folks. It's only a merry-go-round. Hold on to your seats, and keep your eyes wide open. They call it a merry-go-round but that's not an expression to be used in connection with Broadway at times. Take little Kathryn Worcester, for instance. Now, kid! Only the other day I was having my legs cut by brother-in-law Nils T. Granlund we were discussing her possibilities as a screen bet—she was to leave for the coast next week—and Granlund was particularly keen on the idea. He stated nothing would keep Kay here. An automobile ride would be in order. When Kay went under the knife in an attempt to save the beauty of her classic features, if the operation has been no one knows at this writing—but what a price to pay for romance a ride! And now look. That good-looking dame and that good-looking gal. Not walking together these days and nights, but they're still man and wife. William Dorsey and Helen Hendricks. Why it was only the other month, it seems to me, after the local papers had spread themselves with pictures and yarns about their colorful romance that I dropped into them at the Greenwich Village Inn and fell headlong into an affair. And I hope to tell you all of it now. The local scribes and gangs to have A. E. He is cheerful. "You bet it's going to last. Whether you newspaper fellows believe me or not." But there you are—it didn't last.

Well, Billy Leeds hasn't been riding around with us lately—he's been in Europe. All sorts of yarns about Billy and his tremendous wealth, and Broadway even whispers that he settled something like a million dollars on pretty Olive Hamilton, but that isn't so. Not that Billy isn't a generous lad and not enough good words to say a few of the little gals of Broadway whom he's helped out—with no ulterior motive, mind you—but the truth of the matter is Bills has been pretty hard hit—much harder than most people know and while he's no pauper, neither has he all that untold wealth of former years. It's an old story now—all these millions were spent in some fairly enjoyable fashion, whose worth was appreciated by many, and Bill is hardly inexhaustible and who are pretty well broke now and there's no use reciting instances. I'd much rather tell you of someone who had rewarded his wealth, but I don't know of a single case, I honestly don't.

It won't be a bad idea to join this Broadway Merry-Go-Round, as it go for the next few weeks for now it appears that Greta Garbo may well drift eastward to Manhattan within the fortnight—secretly. I pos-he put not to accept that almost fabulous offer and fled to Europe for two weeks personal appearances at the Roxy. Garbo turned it down. I was told by a half a dozen Wall Street magnates of unimpeached social standing and pedigree who make personal appearances for one-half, or even one-quarter of the sum offered Garbo—but then, who'd care to turn out for a Wall Street magnate? Figure it out yourself. Suppose Garbo in the flesh were billed at the Roxy—and let's say, J P Morgan at the Paramount? Who'd draw the bigger crowds? Funny world. Awfully funny! I went into the Newsreel Theater and saw some of the comic Lindy shots. The crowd booed and booed when Hoover's picture was shown, and yet I can remember some weeks ago when they stood and cheered over him. One day's picture was shown and cheered when the feature of Hoover appeared. As for me personally, I never boo, but I do feel like letting out a roar of approval every time they flash Al Smith's not too handsome pan on the sheet.

Don't laff but just keep your eyes wide open. There's a big broad shouldered chap entering that famous haberdashers shop on Broadway in the upper 40's. Sure, you know him—Jack Sharkey. And what's he buying? Pajamas the most passionately hued pajamas in the place! Imagine that—the world's leading pug buying fancy pajamas. Yessir, ladies and gents, times have changed since John L. Sullivan used to snore blissfully while the bulk of his brawny body chafed under the itch of long, uncharitable woolen underwear. And again I call your attention to that duo of blind musicians, one with the accordion, the other with the saxophone. Psychologists, these fellows, for they've discarded the tattered habiliments, badge of the jeergerating beggars, and, instead you see them attired in neat fitting suits and shoes and gay ties and always a smile on their faces, except if you look closely, you'll see no smile in their blank, sightless eyes. Business is good with these chaps, and nobody begrudges them the stream of coin—but bills, nobody donates bills these days—that clank into their cups. For they provide excellent entertainment, and they fill you with cheer—you thank your lucky stars you have your eyesight.

MOVIES CONVINCE SCRIBES SHARKEY VERDICT O. K.

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Why All This Shouting. Man From Mars Queries. A Tempest in a Teapot.

Fans Are Steamed Up. Send Us Billet Doux. We Write Them Back.

Whole World Is Sharkey-Schmeling Cuckoo

What's all the [illegible] about? inquires The Man from Mars, as he paces [illegible] aboard the road. Forty miles an hour I could hear your little ear drums rambling with Sharkey-Schmeling talk. And I see a [illegible] view and wherever I looked I saw your earth people standing on the corner telling each other this Sharkey-Schmeling stuff hasn't robbed. Whoever Sharkey and Schmeling are they are drowning out the political convention, prohibition, all else. Who are they, Kings of the Earth? No, Master Mars, they're kings of the ring just now. They're kings for a day. On every tongue today, forgotten tomorrow. This turmoil and babble [illegible] is a tempest in a teapot. It will boil itself out in [illegible] Fizz! We Americans [illegible] We've had a thing or [illegible] We yelled it over [illegible] the Man Killer [illegible] the Long Count [illegible] Chicago after [illegible] Yankee Stadium [illegible] Tuesday night a negative record in the battle of The Big Hole in The Ground

This humble columnist didn't see the Big Fight. We have passed no opinion on whether the decision was right or wrong. Yet a couple of hundred readers are calling us all kinds of names nevertheless. One writer accuses us of being "Tammany and post with the perpetrators of the Steal of the Century." That's funny to what some of the others say. We didn't see the Big Fight. But along with millions of others we heard it over the air. No one on earth, except a boob who saw the Sharkey-Schmeling fight from alongside a loud receiver for thinking that Schmeling won. The funny part of it is the ones who are raising the loudest squawk over the decision are those who like us did not see the encounter, but heard it through the voices of Graham McNamee and Charles Francis Coe. As we said before Graham McNamee never should be allowed to broadcast an actual ring encounter itself. He's great on color and "sweet round stuff" but he's a dud failure when he attempts to describe the contest itself. Charles Francis Coe is superbly equipped for the job. He knows boxing and, what's more, can tell what he sees and knows. For apparently thought Schmeling had won. Other just as good judges thought Sharkey was entitled to the verdict. In all close ring encounters you will find this variance of opinion. Difference of opinion makes the world go round. Oddsays Napoleon!

When ur [illegible] demon radio fan [illegible] coffee cups. W[illegible] the last we [illegible] the toes and [illegible] greet us with a [illegible]

"I am sorry, p[illegible] another mistake. [illegible] the paper that you [illegible] Why, Battling Ketchup clearly outpointed the One-Round Wonder boy."

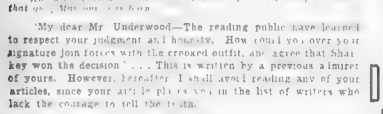
"How can you say that [illegible] didn't even see the encounter."

"But, you [illegible] I hear it with my own ears."

An [illegible]

'My dear Mr Underwood—The reading public have learned to respect your judgment and honesty. How could you, over your signature join forces with the crooked outfit, and agree that Sharkey won the decision . . . This is written by a previous admirer of yours. However, hereafter I shall avoid reading any of your articles, since your name will be placed on the list of writers who lack the courage to tell the truth.

Unsigned—as usual. How about the courage to sign your so strong in expressed convictions? But let's sit down and talk things over, any way, Old Man (may I call you Old Man, we haven't commenced until today upon the Sharkey-Schmeling decision being right or wrong. Would it be fair. How could we when we didn't see it? Today's comment is based on the moving pictures. Secondly, Old Man, are all men who disagree with us crooks or suckers? Can't there be an honest intelligent difference of opinion? Is it fair to attribute wrongful motives to everyone who holds a different opinion than your own? Isn't it awful easy, when you're hot under the collar, to sit down and write something which, when you read it next day, you see you didn't mean? Isn't it especially easy, and mayhap cowardly, to write anonymous letters"



Remember [illegible] The [illegible] any [illegible] thing of [illegible] him. If [illegible] of [illegible] then [illegible] fair. We [illegible] every [illegible] Man, [illegible] of a [illegible] Only [illegible] We're [illegible] maybe [illegible]

But Old Man, you can bet that they're honest mistakes. You can bet that we never have written nor ever will write, a single, solitary word that we knew or knew to be untrue. Sure we'll josh a bit, and kid a bit, and maybe get peeved over a thing here and there, now and then. If we didn't our stuff would die of dry rot and you wouldn't read two lines of it. But to deliberately print a false statement or an untruth—may our right hand wither if we ever knowingly do so! All the money in the world, Old Man isn't going to induce us to write a single line that we know to be untrue. There are nine little Underwoods—count 'em, nine—and when it comes time for their Daddy to Go West, he's going to be able to look each and every one of 'em in the eye and say, "Pals o' Mine. I haven't got much to leave you. But one thing you can always be sure of. Your Old Man was a Square Shooter and dealt on the level may get us more in the next world than it has in this.

Movies Prove Sharkey Won by Big Margin

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

[illegible]ks, if you think there was something wrong with the de[illegible] gave Jack Sharkey the world's heavyweight champion[illegible] over Max Schmeling, Go to Keith's Boston Theater and take a good look at the Big Fight pictures.

We [illegible] that the same p[illegible] being shown at [illegible] We certainly couldn't find any[illegible] thing wrong with the decision as shown in the fight films at Keith's last night.

[illegible] films at the RKO Theater, last night, we couldn't detect a single, solitary thing the matter with it.

Go to the [illegible] an open mind and [illegible] the decision will agree with [illegible] that Sharkey won. [illegible] even call [illegible] Jack [illegible] and Exhibit No 2." If you [illegible] the best bit of partisanship [illegible] your opinion [illegible] wrong right out the door.

If you're a Sharkey rooter don't [illegible] for an attempt to [illegible] to Max. If you're a Schmel[illegible] rooter don't strive too hard to be fair to Jack. You may [illegible] it's a tough tough job [illegible] a close boxing contest—no [illegible] world.

the North, the Yale freshmen pulled to a surprisingly decisive three lengths victory over a Crimson boatload that was rated their equal.

Overcoming a quarter-length margin Harvard opened at the start, the Eli youngsters raced steadily away increasing the lead at each quarter until two full lengths of open water showed at the finish.

Even more surprising, however, was the conquest of the Harvard junior varsity that upset the "dope" and put an entirely different complexion on the varsity duel scheduled for 7.15 p.m.

Never relinquishing a tiny lead gained at the start, rowing a typical Harvard front race, Packet stroked a fresh crew to a full length victory over a Yale eight that was badly washed out at the finish. John Atwood of Siplap Field Mass. No 5 in the Yale boat, collapsed at the finish.

CLOSE RACE LOOMS

The experts, rating the Harvard varsity a full 10 lengths better than its own juniors switched immediately their forecasts that Yale would race away with the varsity struggle.

The Yale junior varsity contended nowhere near 10 engths worse than the Yale varsity were expected to trounce the Harvard juniors by several engths.

Harvard's time for the mile and a half in the junior varsity race was 8 minutes 35 seconds. Yale was rocked in 8.50.15.

The freshman times were considerably slower, Yale winning in 8.16 1-5, with Harvard time in 8.30½.

CAREY THINKS PITCHING TO SETTLE RACE

By JOE CASHMAN

When Max Carey, then Maximillian Canarius, was preparing for the Lutheran ministry, he was taught, among other things, to play fair and always tell the truth.

He learned only the second. Until Friday, when he broke down, he was one of the outfielders [illegible] runner in baseball, batting [illegible] .295 average.

And he [illegible] With [illegible] ing the [illegible] ager could [illegible] for [illegible] the [illegible] low-pedigree [illegible] Brooks. [illegible] dict a pennant [illegible] even a [illegible] chance at [illegible] front.

"Pitching will settle this closest of National League races," opined Max as we broke in on him today while he was busy planning for the second game of the current series with our Braves at the Wigwam.

"The Cubs have good pitching, that's why they're setting the pace," he continued. "The Braves, too, have been getting fine flinging and just as long as they continue to they'll be very troublesome.

"My pitching hasn't been of championship caliber. It's been spotty, very good at times and not so good on other occasions. Consistently effective flinging is necessary to win this season.

"I'm not saying, mark you, that my pitching won't improve enough to carry us home in front. With Danny Vance, Van Mungo, Babe Phelps, Hollis Thurston, Fred Heimach, Joe Shaute, Bill Clark, Austin Moore and Jack Quinn, I have fingers who, all their best, constitute one of the strongest corps in the circuit.

"I'm merely saying that up to now my twirlers haven't been in top form often enough and if they don't improve, we don't figure to win.

"Outside of the box, I think my team compares favorably with most rivals and the standing tends to prove this. With not so hot pitching, we are only four games from the top. With good pitching, we would be hard to stop."

The mound weakness of the Robins was quite apparent in the first game of the series with the Braves.

Dazzy Vance [illegible] of the pitching staff, was handed a four-run lead in the first inning when Harry "Socks" Seibold was knocked over the lot, but the Tribe [illegible] ally won in the 10th, 6 to 5, when Maranville singled and Spencer tripped off the [illegible]

What local movie writer's column is noticeably the better for he having a daily reading session of the film bible, our Louella Parsons' daily column? . . . Does this localite think her public will never know? . . . Outside of the fact that there's never been an indication that Graham McNamee ever knew much about the technicalities of the broadcasting business, what was the other reason he wasn't on view at his screeching during that "Shanghai Schmeling" air-go Tuesday night? . . . What exhibit big shot, having eaten of the crumbs of Depression, is now giving lessons in the Terpsichorean art? . . . Is it true that the Woburn cops are taking a good share of ribbing for that recent break in the business district? . . . Is it true that drip coffee is less annoying to your nerves than percolated or boiled Brazil juice? . . . And that there's a close resemblance of that new tune "Every Little Bit of Me Loves Every Bit of You" and "The Girl Friend," and that "Was What I've Wanted You to Say" comes close to "Rose of Washington Square"?

4 FACE ARREST IN AID FRAUDS IN EVERETT

Warrants are to be asked for four Everett residents, one a woman, who are charged with larceny of public funds through the Everett welfare department as a result of a widespread investigation started by Mayor O'Neil.

Startling revelations have been made in the welfare department since William Brickley was appointed chief investigator early this week.

1000 CASES UNDER PROBE

Declining to reveal names, Investigator Brickley said that all four against whom action is planned have volunteered to make restitution and that the total sum offered in restitution exceeds $1000. Brickley declares he has nearly 1000 cases lined up for investigation.

One warrant is to be asked against a man receiving old age assistance who has deposits in three banks totaling $4000 and who is believed to have funds on deposit in other banks.

This man is a resident of the Woodlawn section and has drawn $322.25 from the Welfare department.

Faced with the evidence the man is reported to have offered restitution. The matter has been placed in the hands of the city legal department for action.

Investigator Brickley has also placed in the hands of the legal department a complaint against a young man who has drawn $100 in welfare funds while working all of the time at a substantial salary. When he applied for aid he presented a physician's certificate stating that he was unable to work and action is contemplated against the physician.

WORKED AT NIGHT

In another case, Brickley has made complaint against a man who has had steady job nights receiving good pay, and who claimed he had been out of work and had been found at home every time the agent called at the house daytimes.

In the complaint made against the woman, Brickley reports that while the woman had no funds when she started drawing aid, she soon afterwards received a large award in a damage suit. She made no report of this award, and continued to receive welfare aid.

Because of the activities of Brickley to date, Welfare applications have dropped perceptibly. Many have failed to apply at the Welfare department office for money which has been allotted them and these cases have been listed and handed to Investigator Brickley to look into.

It is reported that in one such case a family which had resided in Everett for a score of years had moved out over night. It is further understood the family was found to own real estate in Everett and an attachment of this property is contemplated.

HELPFUL DEVELOPMENTS NOW RECORDED

By B. C. FORBES

Many people have begun to feel less discouraged.

Men who have returned from extensive trips throughout the United States tell me that acute nervousness has subsided, that here and there business men report slightly better demand, that bankers no longer lie awake o' nights fearful of runs on their institutions.

In the highest financial circles sentiment assuredly has improved. The strictly banking situation no longer occasions alarm. The steadiness exhibited by the bond market since the New York bond-buying corporation was formed has greatly encouraged heavyweight individual investors, savings bankers, insurance executives and other important owners of bonds.

The shrinkage in stock trading to the smallest volume in eight years or more is interpreted as meaning that necessitous liquidation has dried up, at least unless market values should shrink still further.

While doings in Congress are still watched very closely, apprehension over disastrous legislative action has distinctly subsided.

Foreign conditions still excite concern in influential circles. But even in this direction hope has developed that something short of the worst may eventuate. President Hoover's latest armament-reducing plan is not expected to produce far-reaching, tangible results.

Stray Bits of Encouragement

Whereas the disposition heretofore has been to pay attention only to unfavorable happenings, such as dividend reductions, unfavorable corporation reports, dwindling railway traffic, unemployment increases, receiverships and the like, there has arisen readiness to take cognizance of favorable developments. While most of these are not of superlative importance, and far from supplying convincing testimony that the turn has definitely come, nevertheless it is something that there are stray facts and figures not discouraging. For example:

The commercial failure record is less dolorous.

Electric power consumption shows a smaller decrease than 12 months ago.

Bank reopenings are receiving more attention than the occasional bank failures.

The security markets are exhibiting greater resisting powers.

The rate of the downswing in the general price level has slackened.

Here and there retail trade shows some life.

America this week has gained, not lost, gold.

Mr. Dawes is not the only notable who has lately voiced the opinion that the worst is over.

The oil industry records some progress in its fight against demoralizing overproduction and price-cutting.

Alarm over the railway outlook has at least subsided slightly.

A number of business concerns of less than gigantic size report modest improvement in sales and earnings.

Westinghouse sends this wire:

"Our employes' sales campaign, originated and conducted by them to put men back to work, has topped the $2,000,000 mark, with 15 days to go. Many corporations in allied and unrelated lines are following the Westinghouse employes' splendid example."

NEW ENGLAND BUILDING GAIN IS REVEALED

By FRANK H. MELOON

Figures made public today on new building in New England reveal a gain for the past week over the previously reported week. F. W. Dodge compilations show the total of contracts awarded for the week ended June 21 was $2,372,200; in the prior week the total was $1,917,500. The total for the past week also exceeds the weekly average for the year to date, which is $2,327,500.

New England textile leaders, who in recent years have appreciated the competition of rayon with other textiles, are interested in the announcement that Japan's rayon exports have increased 150 per cent in the first four months of 1932. New England mills turning out rayon products and hiring thousands of workers—and not hiring thousands of others who remain only "potentially employed"—seem apt to feel that protection is needed against the importations of cheap labor.

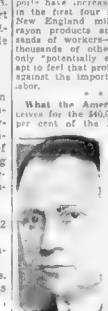
What the American people receive for the $65,000,000 (about 1 per cent of the Federal budget) for the United States Department of Commerce will be described by Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, in a radio talk Sunday, June 26, from 7 to 7.15 p. m. (D. S. T.).



Dr. Julius Klein

Dr. Klein will sketch some of the functions of each of the 12 principal units of the department—eight of which are [illegible] the promotion of business and property, the other four being service organizations to American business, returning about 50 cents on every dollar appropriated.

This talk may be heard over Stations WNAC, Boston; WEAN, Providence; WORC, Worcester; WDRC, Hartford; WFEA, Manchester, N. H., and WLBZ, Bangor.

Woolworth, Ltd., to List More Shares

London, June 24—F. W. Woolworth Co. Ltd. has received permission of the London Stock Exchange to list 12,750,000 additional shares of its ordinary stock. This makes total outstanding issue of 15,000,000 shares eligible to be dealt in.

When the company recapitalized a year ago it agreed with [illegible] Exchange not to apply for permission to trade in more than 2,250,000 of the ordinary shares until June 11, 1932. The latter amount represents the number of shares offered for public subscription by N. M. Rothschild & Sons, London.

It is not believed that any appreciable amount of stock will appear on the market as a result of the additional listing.

—SPECTATOR—

Says:

The market has tried at times to get somewhere, but hasn't seemed to have enough push. It may be the surprise rediscount rate cut here may provide the stimulus, even though it is significant only in continuing the cheap money policy in effect for a long time. At any rate, the word went around not to be short, which seems like a straw in the wind.

Bonds and Stocks

The bond market should do better for the rate cut is directed more for the benefit than stocks. Stock have a way of taking care of themselves anyway.

For there are hundreds of brokers hungry for business, and if they can't get anywhere putting [illegible]

Havana Electric's Net Is $4,153,238

—STATE ST.—

Hears:

That the principal concern of the financial district is manner in which the old lows stand up under selling pressure. If the 45 level holds as well on the downside as 51 held on the upside, there will be some reason for the belief that the markets have at last entered the accumulation phase which must precede a protracted bull move. A good display of strength at the old lows will induce some buying for a trading turn.

Buying Rail Bonds

Recent proposals to allow the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to loan railroads funds which they may use to purchase their own bonds in the open market, are not approved in all quarters. Indeed some observers find it hard to believe any real good can come of such a step. The effect on third rail liens will be marked enough. But higher prices will obviously balk the attempts to buy in a good part of the capitalizations at depreciated prices.

On the other hand consideration of the avowed purpose of the proposed loans raises some questions as to their propriety. If the rails are overcapitalized just why should the public funds go to extricate them when the same public funds are denied the tremendous number of cases of personal unemployment to the moan of State Street owners of the rails must go through 'the summer,' and the responsibility belongs to private not public agencies.

Ticker Talk

Wall Sts [illegible] meets next Wednesday and it is expected the directors will place the common on a [illegible] annual dividend basis at [illegible] . . . The coal company will show that first quarter operations resulted in a deficit of $2,500,000 . . . The most persistent bear the writer comes in contact with has a good words to say for Sears Roebuck. He thinks the management alone is worth $10 a share.

* * *

Real leadership is shown by the group of financiers and industrialists who are working to increase the use of trade acceptances. Their idea is to create a demand for the credit now lying in the banks. They represent what the trade calls "A1" names and they will pay for their purchases with acceptances. They hope smaller corporations will follow their lead and increase the velocity of credit money.

Live News of Leaders Today in Wall Street

AMERICAN CAN, Atchison and Allied Chemical bore the brunt of selling today. All three have dividend meetings next week and considerable doubt exists whether present rates will be maintained. Selling spread to other issues where later dividend meetings are scheduled, principally U. S. Steel preferred and American Telephone.

Auburn Early Strong Spot, but Recedes

Auburn was an early strong spot today, running up more than two points, but lost this and as much more in the subsequent action. Union Carbide was depressed by weakness in Allied Chemical. Postponement of the decision on the California crude oil price increase brought an unsettled tone to the petroleum shares.

Drop in Atchison Lowers the Rails

Rails were carried down today by the drop in Atchison, which sold at the lowest levels since the turn of the century. Union Pacific found a thin market, while New York Central was heavy.

See Short Interest Near Record Peak

Considerable interest was shown in the estimate of one market commentator that the short interest in the market at the present time is near its record peak total. There are, it is pointed out, 152 issues loaning flat or at a premium, which is only slightly under the high record for the bear market.

Covering Is Seen In American Can

Some smart covering was reported to have taken place during recent weakness in American Can. Short interest in the stock is said to be of unwieldy proportions, or as one trader is reported to have put it "there's too much company being short."

Largest Evening Circulation in New England

EARLY UPTURN IS WIPED OUT IN WALL ST.

New York, June 25—An early upturn was wiped out as trading progressed listlessly on the New York Stock Exchange today.

The general level of share prices came close to the cyclical low of June 1, as demand all but disappeared from the market today, and prices give way under meagre offerings.

UPTURN AT OPENING

The list had a momentary upturn at the start, presumably in response to the cut in the Federal Reserve rediscount rate, but softness of American Can, quickly followed by slumps in Atchison, soon pulled the market down. Some of the leaders plunged through their previous resistance levels into new low ground.

Stock prices gave ground under light selling, most leaders selling off 1 to 3 or more points in the late trading.

An early bulge was wiped out in the afternoon after which the list braced itself, but at a lower price level.

American Telephone, American Can, U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical and Atchison were in new lows for the bear market. Sales approximated 700,000 shares.

DIVIDEND SLASHES FEARED

The market appeared to be unsettled primarily by the approach of dividend action on Atchison, American Can, and Allied Chemical shares. Directors of these three corporations are slated to meet on Tuesday. Congress, the primary aim of the session of Congress by the knotty and controversial problem of relief legislation, and the prospect that the Democratic platform would take an important stand on economic problems, added to uncertainties.

The market showed no sign of relief at the announcement that the Senate hearings in connection with its investigation of stock trading had been adjourned for the summer.

As a matter of fact, these hearings have not appeared to have any appreciable effect upon the market, since the anti-short selling agitation died down. In fact, many operators in Wall St. lean to the view that the investigation may bring reforms of lasting benefit to investor and financier alike.

The Lausanne conference was closely watched in Wall St. for constructive developments, and banking quarters were inclined to express satisfaction with the temperate tenor of the conversations.

Also bankers here feel that a general understanding among the various delegates of the severity of the situation in Central Europe augured well for some at least temporarily workable agreement.

United Gas Corp. Loans Are Extended

Bank loans of the United Gas Corp. amounting to $21,250,000 have been extended one year from July 20, the maturity date. it was announced today. Electric Power & Light Co., which controls United Gas, in the 12 months ended April 30, earned 88 cents a share on the common stock outstanding at the end of the period, compared with 52.86 a share for the previous 12 months.

Reading Earnings Show an Increase

New York, June 24 (AP)—Reading railroad had a larger net railway operating income in May of this year than in 1931. Last month's total was $917,307 against $462,949.

Oil Industry Operating Out of Red, Says Beatty

New York, June 24—The oil industry as a whole has turned the corner and is now out of the red, according to Judge Amos L. Beaty, president of the American Petroleum Institute.

If the improvement in the direction of earning moderate profits since April is maintained, one of the most dangerous sore spots on the American economic scene will have been healed. Curiously enough, the betterment has occurred in the face of the first significant decline in gasoline consumption since the depression started. Up to the present year, domestic consumption and exports for the last nine months of 1931 ranged between 6.8 per cent and 15 per cent.

Judge Beaty, who was formerly executive head of the Texas Corporation, has quietly and unostentatiously done a remarkable job since taking over his new work last November, at a time when the industry was not only greatly depressed but highly chaotic.

Instead of seeking in cover up troubles, Judge Beaty, at the December meeting of the directors of the institute in St. Louis, focussed attention on the seriousness of the problem.

The industry had again reverted to the serious stage which had been temporarily improved some months earlier by militia efforts to reduce production of crude oil in Texas and Oklahoma.

The head of the American Petroleum Institute now feels that the position of the industry could further be strengthened by a further curtailment of 8 to 10 per cent in crude oil production.

He said that the objective is not to make large profits under existing conditions, but simply to make sure that the industry can carry on through hard times and not get smashed.

Whether the industry is now overproducing, of course, depends on whether the minimum or maximum projected decline in consumption of gasoline is realized.

Instead of standing by and wondering, the petroleum industry could doubtless stimulate consumption by a co-operative advertising campaign, supported by all the principal companies, which would depict the joys of motoring, even in an obsolete model.

Congressman Fuller of Arkansas has introduced a bill requiring that every Government employe be able to sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

He should go further—amend the bill so it will require that every Congressman, in the next war, go fight for "The Star Spangled Banner."

Then there wouldn't be any next war.

(Time Magazine)

Late for the opening of Flo Ziegfeld's revival of "Show Boat," Financier Bernard Mannes Baruch was making for his seat when the hanger-loop on his overcoat snagged on the button of the usher's uniform. Usher and financier struggled for a long moment in the darkness. Finally the usher ripped the button off.

SAD BUT TRUE DEPARTMENT

Sing a song of statesmen
Rattled and downcast
By the public's yipping
During weeks just past,
Will the tired voters
With their ballots shout
To the tired statesmen—
Scram! You're through,
Get out!?
What a silly question!
At the polls next Fall
You will see the voters
Re-elect them all.

BOOKS AND CHARACTERS

By LINCOLN KIRSTEIN

Many people have a fairly accurate account of how this country was settled, the organization of settlements in the North and South—the break with Europe, the confederation of the independent states, and the long fight for self-ending in the tragedy of the Civil War. For anyone who feels at all hazy on the subject or our historical background, particularly at this time when we have on the one hand an economic crisis and on the other hand a political crisis, there is surely no single book so valuable for clarification or education than "The Oxford History of the United States: 1783-1917," by Samuel Eliot Morison.

Professor Morison wrote this book while he was at Oxford teaching American history to Englishmen. A very gracious lady asked the visiting professor what he was doing in Oxford. He replied that he was going to give a series of lectures in the development of the United States, in fact he was teaching American history.

"Ah," she said kindly, "then you won't be here long."

Though our history as a nation is not two hundred years old and England's is nearly a thousand, the two volumes of the Oxford History cover an enormous amount of exceedingly complicated factors in a manner that is all the more amply impressive on account of the elaboration and variety of the incidents he has had to treat in so national story. Any two hundred years in recorded time of any known nation could probably supply fascinating and varied material—but these are those isolated, benign years when the New American continent has recently weathered, which somehow seem to have an extra and special significance.

EMIGRATION CITED

In the first place and from one point of view only, if one considers the extraordinary fact of the continuous emigration and settlement of an enormous continent by an emigration from foreign countries, unparalleled since the time, more than a thousand years before, when the Mongol hordes swept over Asia and into Europe, the history of America is enormously dramatic. In no other relatively short measure of a century has such an area of natural possibilities been so thoroughly exploited with so many new devices for mechanical conveyance. Of course, without steel and iron for railroads, without electricity, without the inventions which harnessed the extraordinary natural resources, the sudden settlement on such a colossal scale could never have been realized.

But a history of the United States, such as the Oxford History so brilliantly and essentially is, is only incidentally a record of Yankee ingenuity with mechanical forces. Primarily it records the politics! issues in their sequence, which after all are the effects and implications of our technical achievement. And one is struck by a fresh reading over the very tortuous tale of American politics, that while our inventions gained almost breathlessly and brilliant, our political talents, in spite of superb exceptions, have been far too largely repetitious and wasteful.

The science of politics in the United States has rarely risen to the level of policy. After the first disinterested effort of the men who made us free was realized in the body of the Constitution, the career of politics in America has been, generally speaking, a career of personal exploitation, with consideration of the public good as an afterthought. This is, of course, true in all the other countries of the world, but with two or three important differences.

NO CIVIL SERVICE SYSTEM

America, unlike England, has built up hardly any system of civil service. The game of politics in America connected with State and Party systems is a game of practical expediency based on personal prestige and the mechanics of party machinery which has little or nothing to do with the main issues of governing a country, which, one is led to believe, constitutes a political science.

The Tammany organization in New York City, perhaps the oldest and surely the most efficient, from a political point of view, of any school of politics in this country, has most of its promotions to public service wiped out by such investigations as have been recently carried on by the Hofstader committee, which has given the governor one of the most important states in the country the difficult political problem of removing the mayor of the largest city in the world from office.

The politics of policy, of the ideas by which men govern each other and the forms by which their ideas are transmitted into action have somehow, in this country, never been able to make a proper fusion. In England the ideas have a freer range because the forms perhaps are transformed and the usage more elastic. Here, most of the energy of the politicians has gone into the development of the forms, or the purchase of party power, of party politics and reciprocal personal loyalties so that the men who are really interested in power and government keep away from politics entirely, preferring to maintain the integrity of an independent judicial sovereignty rathe rthan risk the shabby hypocrisy of party promises and oratory.

It is a well known fact even at the present—and perhaps more than ever at the democratic party would rather whip each other than rule the country.

There has been increasingly less formal opposition in the American system. That is, the opposition of English politics where the premier out of power serves as a check and as a constant goad to the party in power. Aside from the almost perfunctory difference of attitude in regard to the tariff, what is the difference, the real, not the personal difference, between the Democrats and the Republican party?

WET BECAUSE OF G. O. P.

If the Democrats make a wet platform it is scarcely because they are wet, but merely because the Republicans shilly-shallied, and they hope by a definite stand they can put their party in power. There is probably more opposition of ideas in a southern and southern Democrat or Republican than in a man who votes for Hoover as opposed to one who votes for Smith. Ideas as such have always been at a premium in this country.

The planning of possibility by careful reckoning based on precedent and likelihood with a liberal sacrifice of personal avidity has always been denied for the benefit of direct action, as if the violence of sudden energy was more powerful. This country has always been a country of pioneers. The pioneers conquered each new frontier and went on to the next and so on to the coast of California. They never stopped to exhaust the possibility of the land or its resources. They left excellent as long as there was enough land to play with, and for years it seemed as if there would always be enough land. The pioneer spirit of automatic action may be responsible for our unimagined economic and political crisis.

We desperately need now are pioneers of planned, ruthless, disinterested and independently realized ideas.

JUDGES CHOOSE REVUE STARS

Some lucky boy or girl will be chosen from the RKO Opportunity Revue at Keith's Theater tonight to take part in the grand finals of the Opportunity Revue later in the season.

The participants in the revue, all from Boston, have had a week's work before the footlights, aside from several weeks of intensive training before the staging of their show.

A committee of three judges, Harry Mcfoonal, well known vaudevisional manager for RKO Theaters; Bobby Connolly, who arranged the revue, and a representative from the Boston Evening American will decide who is the most talented performer among the group.

Other prizes will also be awarded. A scholarship to the Albertina Emerson School of Dancing will be given the best girl dancer. Ned Wayburn has also offered a free scholarship to his dancing school to either boy or girl who proves most proficient.

More than 1500 employes and friends will gather Saturday afternoon at the annual outing of the Employes' Association of the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. at Lake Pearl park, Wrentham.

Dinner will be served when the picnickers arrive, and a program of athletics, including water sports, will begin at 2 p. m.

FIEDLER ASKS PUBLIC TO AID

Plans for this summer's esplanade concerts are complete.

Arthur Fiedler, originator and director of these concerts, has not, as many music lovers feared, abandoned all hope of providing this popular series this year.

But $12,000 is needed to meet the expenses involved, and the public is asked to contribute.

The time is short, the first concert being scheduled for July 7. Contributions are therefore needed immediately, Fiedler said.

Fiedler pointed out that there were more than 20,000 persons at the closing concert last summer, and if any doubt there that they sent in $1, the fund would be overwhelmingly subscribed.

Contributions will be received at the Merchants National Bank, 28 State st., Boston, and checks should be made payable to the Arthur Fiedler Concert Fund, the director said.

There will be four weeks of concerts, if the fund is raised. Fiedler said this year would be a test and believes nothing can prevent the holding of these concerts indefinitely in the future, if the obstacles presented this summer can be overcome.

Youth and Prohibition

This Wild Life Can't Go On Forever

If halting politicians, some of them with less sense than an ox, would only digest the news of the day with intelligence, they would find abundant cause to do away with this vicious thing called prohibition without further quibbling.

You find in one paragraph that an 18-year-old boy in Fall River is guilty of driving his car while drunk and of jeopardizing the lives of the people on the highway. IT IS HIS SECOND OFFENSE AND HE IS SENT TO JAIL FOR SEVEN MONTHS.

In another paragraph you find that a 17-year-old lad in Boston is accused of the same offense after he crashes into six cars, one after another, injuring some of their occupants and endangering the lives of all.

These are not isolated incidents. They are every-day occurrences in the reign of disorder, peril and lawlessness synonymous with the noble experiment.

We were told that prohibition would obliterate drunkenness, produce temperance and cause wings to sprout on the shoulders of every young man and woman. Well, the only sprouting has been of criminal records in the orgy of wild life among our youth.

Week in and week out, the auto licenses of more than 100 Bay State drivers are suspended or revoked for driving while under the influence of liquor and a dismal proportion of these are boys still in their teens.

Prior to prohibition, the young man who drank was a social outcast among the youth of his age. We now find him equipped with a hip flask and a high-powered car in a whirl of recklessness on the roadways. The police stations and the courts were almost alien to him. Now we find him entering upon his adult life with all the experiences of arrest, court trials and a criminal record behind him.

This country can't go on forever if its rising generation is to be nurtured in loose morality and criminal recklessness. There will come a sad end to it, just as Greece and Rome fell victims to the licentiousness of their people. We could stand a few less Fourth of July orations and a few more constructive acts from these heavy-jowled politicians who seem not only blind to conditions but dumb as well.

Aged Women Lose Home

Sad Result of Heartless Absconder

Thirty-five aged women, dispirited in their sorrow, were transferred this week to the Boston Home for Aged Women. Some of them were moved in ambulances, suffering the frailties consequent upon old age.

They were moved from what had been the Winchester Home for the Aged, in Charlestown, for many years a reputable institution.

These good women had invested their life savings in this home, to insure comfort for themselves and independence in their few remaining years. They were paying their way in dignity. But their funds were absconded by one Wiley, and now, as he serves his twelve-year sentence in prison, possibly he meditates upon the fact that his errant dishonesty has deprived them of their independence, forced the brand of pauperism upon them and implanted uncertainty and sorrow for the harmony and contentment which should dwell in their minds until the end comes.

Calvin Coolidge once said to this newspaper, upon his retirement from the presidency, that he would like in the future to be a trustee of funds. He realizes the grave responsibilities which such a trust implies. From the carelessness with which courts appoint trustees of bankrupt estates and stewards of funds and liquidators of closed banks, there is wonder that we do not see more of hardship such as has been visited upon these fine old women whose life savings were squandered.

Peace Amid Porpoises

Warping his 37-foot boat at Gravesend Bay, New York, Edward Miles, an amateur Columbus, stepped ashore at the completion of a feat that must arouse envy in the breasts of many stay-at-homes. He made a 27,000-mile cruise around the world alone.

It took him four years, and presumably he liked the experience, for he is going again. For weeks and weeks his boat was a solitary speck on the ocean, but never he felt lonesome. He used no tobacco. Since he is a teetotaler, he spurned the solace of alcohol, which is usually the raison d'etre of most ocean voyages. Nor did he ever swear, though the difficulties of cooking a stew in a hurricane must have been great.

He did not even amuse himself by fishing once in a while. In short, he was sufficient unto himself, contented, and solitude had no terror for him. An encyclopedia gave him all the fun he needed. He was not particularly interested in where he was headed for, so long as he kept going.

His attitude is one of enviable philosophy. It may or may not explain much, but he said he had been married four times.

'Experiment' a Failure

President James L. McConaughy told the graduating class of Wesleyan University that prohibition is a failure.

"The experiment was, I think, a noble one," he said. "But it has proved to be a failure. Some other method must be tried."

The public estimate of prohibition as an utter failure may well be said to be quite unanimous when we hear the concession made by such a distinguished Methodist clergyman who is president of a distinguished Methodist university. About the only one left to be heard from in this vein is Bishop Cannon.

Let the 'Super' Sing

Michael H. Crowley, our Police Superintendent, suggests that auto drivers should get down on their knees and pray every day to avert accidents.

We have a better suggestion than that. Let Michael sing "Tim Toolin" to them. There's the charm, my men, to sooth the savage beast.

New York Day by Day

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, June 24—Thoughts while strolling: Those "Rooms to Let" ads on fashionable East Side homes. I. Klein and O. Soglow, the caricaturists, are pals from Ghetto days. Where's Peter Arno, by the way? Mrs. E. W. Hutton has Garbo tootsies. Dr. Bolling Lee—in a cottage by the sea, tee-dum-te-dee.

A flying trio always makes me think of kicking up dust on a country road. Tony Balcom who sculpts in tin cans. And has a clientele among yacht owners, if any. Overheard: "That Morning Glory Fizz has made the world dandy again." I'm always getting Ben Ami and Paul Muni mixed.

Henry L. Doherty, a Columbus, O., boy, who made good in the city. An "out-smarted" Wall street for years. There's a resemblance somehow between Katherine Brush and Claudette Colbert. George Collins, the mayor's cousin and constant companion. One-word description of Amelia Earhart—exciting.

Ely Culbertson looks like a third baseman. What I could do to a beefsteak and kidney pie. Who remembers cushion mats for the front porch? Leon Errol has had a six months joust with a match-burned hand. He forget to tuck in the flap. Mrs. Ed Wynn—Frank Keenan's daughter.

Don Herold got his style of cartooning from his four-year-old daughter. Those youthful, sporty detectives who hang around cabarets. One of our favorite people—Herb Reith. Edmund Lowe's perfect profile. S. Jay Kaufman, the first Broadway columnist. Whose gossip was kindly.

* * *

Nobody shows so much stage nervousness as Helen Morgan. As I live and breathe—a flapper wearing only one half sock. Percy Hammond always seems in indignant glow. And everybody I know appears to be at the end of the rope. But I'm going to tie a knot in mine—and hold on.

* * *

Robert Benchley is the glossarian of "The Wayward Press" under a pseudonym, "Guy Fawkes," in a weekly periodical. He holds up the frailties of journalism and belabors its inefficiency. As Benchley's contact with the newspaper roar has been chiefly in the remoteness of book reviewing, his irony is regarded by many of the guild as a trifle strained. As one of the humble assessors of journalistic valuations, I think it dailies put on a far better show than the weeklies. And with less holier-than-thou.

* * *

There are many, too, who are irritated by trade-mark lines of stage and radio stars. Yet the most successful have employed such accretions for years. Jimmy Durante is known for his lisping: "I got a million of 'em." Al Jolson has his: "You ain't heard nothin' yet." Ted Lewis: "Is everybody happy?" And Tony Wons never omits his: "Are you listenin'?"

All my life I have had a weakness for arcades and tunnels. To me they are always a succession of amazements, especially arcades—from old Emery in Cincinnati to the Burlington in London. From a gentleman who knows something of psychiatry I learn this is an invariable yearning among those with a slight neurosis toward the open spaces. He must be right, for even movies of great wastes such as the Sahara give me sinking spells.

* * *

On 49th st. a crowd of school children in home-going animation, stiffened suddenly into phantom stillness along the sidewalk. Then as suddenly they began to scream and applaud. The object of their emotionalisms was Floyd Gibbons, walking toward the Hotel Winthrop, his home, clad in a suit as white as his famous eye patch. Nor have I ever seen Gibbons quite so pleased.

* * *

Harry Silvey and I dropped into a taxi dance hall near Broadway last evening. Overwhelmed by a lunatic seizure, I decided to hell around in an old fashioned waltz with a blonde temptress. After about three circles of the floor she warned rather brusquely: "Don't dance so fast and you won't sweat so much." And romance, pulling a cap over its outstanding ears, took it on the lam.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"They Also Serve—"

SICK OF IT ALL? Temper going sour? Nerves fraying out under the long uncertainty?

Yes: I know.

Every day letters come, saying that; hundreds of letters, telling of wrecked dreams—

Elsie Robinson

Letters from youngsters who had planned to be married this year; but where's the money? Letters from men who were going to make good, at last; tired men who thought they'd climbed the hill, and now—what ahead?

Letters from mothers who can't believe it yet—can't believe that Mary must give up her school; that Jimmy's got to quit and take a job; that there isn't money enough to pay for an operation for baby Rose!

Frantic young lovers, desperate mothers and fathers, all of them watching dreams go glimmering; all of them rebelling, crying out: "What's the use of it all? Why ha.. it happened? How can we bear it? What can we do?"

Frantic, rebellious, sometimes I too can't bear it. Can't stand the misery of reading another word. Push them all away—those hundreds of pleading letters, those hundreds of clinging hands. Put my head down on my arms; close my eyes.

Close my eyes and through the long, lonely darkness, remember—

Remember a girl who stood as helpless, as rebellious, thirty years ago, looking down at a tiny baby in her arms. Such a tiny body! Such a shining dream! And now, in an hour, to have found that it never could be; to have found that life must become, for both of them, a long, slow lesson in patience and in pain.

A nineteen year old girl; a broken dream; an agony that seemed beyond bearing.

And then, to her frantic sobbing, an old voice saying gently: "Don't be too desperate, child. They also serve who only stand and wait."

And so the old man told the girl of Milton. What life must have meant to him, that great poet, seeing his visions of Heaven and Hell, writing them down in thundering words that shook the world!

And then, suddenly, the splendor was dimmed and the dream had crumbled. Milton crouched in darkness. Milton had gone blind.

Blind! Never more to glimpse the loveliness of dawn; the mystery of the stars! Never more to behold that dark, bright drama of life that leaped, to his reading, from the faces of men! Never more to see words forming beneath his fingers!

Blind! Oh, the awful despair, the frantic bitterness, breaking out in a great cry! Trembling, his daughter wrote the words, not daring to look at that convulsed face:

"When I consider how my light is spent,
'Ere half my days, in this dark world and wide,
And that one Talent which is death to hide,
Lodg'd with me useless—"

Back and forth, back and forth, he walked in his darkness, hammering against the darkness with terrible, incoherent words.

Then gradually he slowed. The hearse, sobbing voice grew gentle. The working face grew still. Slowly the light that had forsaken Milton's eyes dawned in his heart, and he whispered in wonder, in wisdom and peace:

"—God doth not need Either man's work or his own gifts. THEY ALSO SERVE WHO ONLY STAND AND WAIT."

Dreams gone glimmering? Life standing still? Don't lose heart, my dear, Hope on, and still be proud. The cripple, sometimes, wins the grimmest fight. The bright star shines within the darkest night.

"THEY ALSO SERVE WHO ONLY STAND AND WAIT!"

Just Folks

The Good Old Days

If I remember rightly, anyone a cheer could raise,
By speaking with affection of the vanished good old days.
In the times when we'd turned lavish ere the market fell so low,
We boasted rather proudly of the joys we used to know.
And we talked our boyhood over, and we wondered if again
We'd ever know the gladness and the thrill of way back then.

Those were days when boys sold papers and ran errands for a dime,
When a dollar was a fortune and to waste one seemed a crime;
Those were days we worked all summer for a bicycle or gun,
But all that we remembered of our hardships was the fun.
We had come to linen collars, motor cars and foolish ways,
And seemed anxious that our children shouldn't know those days
"good old days."

Now we're wailing in our anguish that the good old days are gone,
There are mighty tasks before us and some mightier following on.
Now our boys are running errands for their nickels and their dimes,
And a dollar seems important in these strange, eventful times.
Hearts and minds by care are sobered, though the pain has been severe.
For our children, let's remember, that those "good old days" are here.

Interpreting Borah's Broadside

By Claude G. Bowers

THERE IS NO MEMBER of the Senate or person in public life for whose intellect and eloquence I have a higher regard than Senator Borah's. He is a rigid individualist, impossible to work in harness. This makes him a trial and torment to party managers and strategists; often a puzzle to the people; and no public man could long sustain himself with such utter independence without having the unique position of Borah in the devotion of his constituency.

His notable speech in the Senate, in which some think he has bolted his party because of its confusing plank on prohibition, has the appearance of a crossing of the Rubicon. He says in an interview that he will not support Mr. Hoover on the platform. That smacks of a bolt.

But we are not at all sure about it.

In a sense Borah has contributed mightily to the strategy of the cunning politicians who framed the plank to catch 'em coming and going. As we suggested in these columns during the convention, the evident purpose of the strategists was to so frame a declaration on prohibition that it could be called "dry" in dry territory and "wet" in wet territory.

How excellently Borah's speech works in with this plan!

* * *

Borah's Speech Can Be Peddled

The real wets wanted a straightforward, explicit, unequivocal declaration for repeal; Mills, representing Mr. Hoover, who wanted nothing of the sort, forced something quite different on the convention. The evident hope was that the wets would hail it as a wet plank and the drys as a dry plank. Thus we were to have the same sort of interminable debate on interpretation that always follows Mr. Hoover's own declarations. This would have permitted the policy of 1928—a blowing hot and cold, a playing fast and loose.

But the adoption of the plank was met with general ridicule and denunciation from the foes of prohibition.

And now Borah, a pronounced dry, opposed to repeal, comes forward with a denunciation of the plank as a wet repeal plank.

This speech of Borah's can be peddled about in New York, Illinois, Massachusetts and New Jersey as proof that the Republicans have put on the armor for repeal.

Could anything better serve the purpose of deception and double dealing?

We exonerate Borah of any such intention, but we can see some redeeming features in the Borah speech from the viewpoint of the double-dealers.

* * *

Will Mr. Borah Bolt?

This makes all the more imperative an honest, frank, straightforward interpretation of the plank by Mr. Hoover in his speech of acceptance. He cannot slur it over now. Not use weasel words. Nor pussyfoot.

Thus Borah has done one thing that may prove embarrassing to Mr. Hoover, who has a constitutional antipathy to plain, unmistakable speech.

Will Mr. Borah bolt? He never has. This is not the first time he has violently disagreed with party policies, but invariably he lines up. We never have been able to understand his ardent championship of Hoover against Smith four years ago. Fundamentally, and on most social and economic issues, he was more in accord with Smith. Was prohibition the determining factor in his action? It is said that he had assurances from Mr. Hoover regarding farm relief that were lightly repudiated after the election.

There scarcely is a single policy of the Administration that can justify Borah's support of Hoover in this campaign. But we shall see what we shall see.

One paragraph in his speech bears out everything that we said in these columns from Chicago:

"There were about three hundred and some-odd Federal officials in the convention, and many of these must be counted as having voted as they did, not because of their convictions, but because of what they deemed political expediency."

That is true; and since straight repeal was defeated by less than three hundred votes, we have a verification of our contention that Federal jobholders, under the lash of Ogden Mills, forced the equivocal plank into the platform.

* * *

Another Phase of His Speech

But we are more interested in another phase of Borah's brilliant speech. Thus he said:

"Without questioning anybody's sincerity or challenging anybody's patriotism or stopping to analyze the platform itself, I choose to leave aside a document which with the exception of one plank fell dead at the feet of the American people, eliciting scarcely a favorable comment from the party press, and arousing not the slightest concern or attention from the people generally."

Here we are, in the midst of the most serious crisis in history, with millions ruined, millions jobless, millions hungry, millions bankrupt; with business prostrate; with financial institutions in danger, and yet no one would suspect from anything uttered in the convention or written into the platform that these are other than normal times.

Our Complaint Against Borah

And that is our complaint against Borah. He knows all this, evidently feels all this; and we should have felt he had rendered a greater service had he not left the platform generally "aside." In heaven's name, why leave that phase aside? That is the phase that threatens our political and social institutions. Is it possible that he thinks the ruination of the farms, the peril to business institutions, the unemployment of millions, the slow starvation of American children are less important than the question of whether a man shall drink a glass of beer or not?

We know that he is not unmindful of this phase of the crisis; but we cannot for the life of us understand why he puts all this "aside."

The people are not going to put it aside. This he sees and says:

"It is clear to me that the Republican campaign will not be fought around the singular document which came from the convention. Long before the strenuous October days arrive the realities of the campaign . . . the increasing demands of the situation will cause this platform to be shoved aside as wholly inadequate and wholly unresponsive to the necessities and demands of the people."

And that is true. The people will determine the course of this campaign. And the fight will revolve around the real issues.

Democrats Must Meet the Issues

If the Democrats are wise next week they will not lay themselves open to any such criticism as that which Borah aims at his own party. A vague weasel-worded platform of inanities and platitudes, merely skirting the edge of the real issues that economic blunders have forced on almost every man, would be the last word in asininity from the party of the opposition.

Intelligently and properly, prohibition will play its part in the drama of next week; but to permit it to overshadow or absorb the issues of bread and butter, of jobs and trade, of relief and reform, would be to convince sixty million Americans that neither party has the courage, the character or the capacity to lead the nation out of the morass in which we find ourselves.

If the Democrats have brains that would not rattle in a mustard seed, they must set their feet solidly on the tragic realities and meet the issues that tragedy has forced upon the people.
